GOP holds budget line

By DAVID ESPO
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Republican-controlled Senate on Wednesday twice rejected Democratic efforts to restore billions of dollars in proposed domestic spending cuts and raise taxes by at least $60 billion over three years to reduce federal deficits.

"If we want government programs, we must also pay for them," said Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., helping to lead the futile Democratic charge to include non-personal tax hikes in the massive deficit-reduction package the Senate has been debating for more than two weeks.

But GOP Leader Robert Dole said, "If we can do it without raising taxes we should," as he made a generally successful appeal to Republicans to resist the Democratic formula for deficit reduction.

The action unfolded on the Senate floor as Dole, working behind the scenes, agreed on fresh concessions in a bid to win a final budget showdown expected either today or next week. Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., said all but $200 million in a deep cut in the proposed guaranteed student loan program would be restored.

On contentious farm issues, Sen. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., said Budget Director David Stockman had agreed on a plan that would, in effect, use federally-owned grain stores to subsidize private grain sales to overseas customers.

In addition, sources who spoke on condition they not be identified said the Republican package would restore money for federal crop insurance and increased farm credit loans and, in exchange, farm state Republicans would support nearly $18 billion in cuts over three years.

The original GOP package would have cut about $19 billion.

Dole had earlier agreed to concessions on handicapped aid, Medicare, Medicaid and other programs to win votes for a revised package — not yet completed — that is expected to contain some type of curtailment on Social Security cost of living increases.

The first Democratic proposal to fail — on a vote of 63-35 — was drafted by Hollings and Sen. Lawton Chiles of Florida. It would have frozen Social Security cost of living increases for six months, scaled back the Reagan defense buildup and held spending on many domestic programs at current levels rather than accept the deep cuts and program eliminations contained in the GOP blueprint.

It called for $72 billion in higher taxes over three years, although both southern senators stressed that individual income tax rates would not be affected. Their plan called for a minimum corporate tax to raise the bulk of the increased revenue.

The second proposal, authored by Democratic Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia, was similar in many respects, although it would have provided full Social Security cost of living benefits, slightly more for military spending and about $61 billion in higher taxes — mainly through closing "corporate tax loopholes" — over three years. It failed on a vote of 54-43.

Reagan attempting tough talk, soft sell

By TERENCE HUNT

Analysis

STRASBOURG, France — President Reagan's tough talk about the Soviet Union, accusing the Kremlin of trying to undermine nuclear stability and extend its military grip around the world, stands in sharp contrast to what the White House says is the real message behind his rhetoric.

"This is a very soft sell," said White House national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane.

"His purpose, whether or not it's clear, is to signal to the Soviet Union that we can turn a new page here, enter a period of reducing tensions and establishing a more stable climate," McFarlane said.

Reagan outlined his views in a speech to the European Parliament on the 40th anniversary of V-E Day, the end of World War II in Europe.

"Ultimately, I hope the leaders of the Soviet union will come to understand that they have nothing to gain from attempts to achieve military superiority or to spread their dominance by force, but have much to gain from joining the West in mutual arms reduction and expanding cooperation," Reagan said.

He accused the Soviets of building nuclear forces to strike first "and thus to disarm their adversary." He said the Kremlin is developing a new generation of mobile, multi-warhead missiles, putting the Soviet Union in the position of "undermining stability and the basis for mutual deterrence."

McFarlane had drawn advance attention to Reagan's dramatic charges about "first strike" and undermining stability.

He said that new mobile missiles, capable of avoiding detection for arms control purposes, would be an "intolerable condition" and would "make us vulnerable to coercion and nuclear blackmail."

Hardly a soft sell.

And yet, there was another side to the speech, a reflection of the tug of war in the senior White House staff of how Reagan should deal with the Soviets in a speech marking V-E day.

Reagan suggested anew a serious of four steps intended to reduce East-West tensions. The measures, including regular meetings of senior defense officials from both sides and exchanging observers at military exercises, have been suggested before but rejected or ignored by the Soviet Union.

Officials said they are being presented again because of the change of leadership, with Mikhail Gorbachev taking power at the Kremlin.

Summing up U.S. policy toward the Kremlin, Reagan said, "The United States does not seek to undermine or change the Soviet system nor to impinge upon the security of the Soviet Union. At the same time it will resist attempts by the Soviet Union to use or threaten force against others, or to impose its system on others by force."

Most Americans won't try farming

By JIM DRINKARD
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans from all walks of life think farmers are hard-working and underpaid, and they wouldn't choose agriculture as a job for themselves or their children, according to a Gallup poll released Wednesday.

"Virtually all segments of the general public have a favorable attitude toward farming," Leonard Wood, a Gallup vice chairman, told a news conference. He said people think government doesn't do enough to help farmers, but they disapprove of current crop price-support programs.

The poll of 1,507 adults, taken by telephone in December, showed that people regard farming near the bottom of a list of possible occupations for themselves and their children. Only truck driving ranked lower as a job parents would like to see their children enter.

"With the population of this country increasingly removed from hands-on farm experience, the gap between those who live on the soil and those who live on the asphalt and cement keeps increasing," said Montana Gov. Ted Schwinden, head of the farm education group Agfocus, which commissioned the survey.

Schwinden said the poll's results and other information would be circulated in Congress and among urban dwellers to convince them of "the importance of agriculture in their daily lives" as lawmakers debate new long-term farm legislation to replace current law, which expires Sept. 30.

The survey, which has an error rate of plus or minus 4 percentage points, found that about nine out of 10 respondents believe farming involves hard labor, entails relatively high risk and requires good management skills.

Just one-third believed the average farmer makes more money than they do, although they greatly overestimated average farm income. The median guess for what farmers make was $24,000 a year, about double the $11,749 reported by the Agriculture Department for net farm income in 1983. That department figure

Superpower conflict mars V-E Day events

Soviet snarl — A9

LONDON — Sharp reminders of today's superpower conflicts mingled on Wednesday with memories of the day that World War II ended in Europe 40 years ago.

While the victorious nations held parades, prayer services and parties to mark V-E Day — Victory in Europe — President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev accused each other's countries of seeking military dominance over the continent left divided after the war.

In Bonn, President Richard von Weizsaecker of West Germany told Parliament that Germans must take responsibility for World War II, including millions of deaths, postwar hardships and the division between East and West.

"Without the war begun by Hitler, it

Minidoka County officials spot measles cases

TWIN FALLS — A small-scale measles epidemic in Minidoka County has spread the disease's itching red spots to 17 children, including a 20-month-old child who had to be hospitalized, the Health Department reported Wednesday.

Health district official Tom Machala said Wednesday morning the outbreak is the biggest in 10 years and represents seven or eight times the usual number of cases for the entire state of Idaho.

He says the measles apparently started in the migrant population in Minidoka County and spread in the schools because of poor immunization levels in the Rupert area.

He said children with the measles run a low-level risk of encephalitis and pneumonia. Symptoms include small red spots on the face and back, ear pain, a cough, and flu-like lethargy.

Machala says children will generally not be contagious four days after the spots first appear and that parents should give measles victims plenty of rest.

The Health Department first found out about the unusual number of cases on May 2, and that doctors and parents in the area have begun reporting more cases since then, he said. The first reported case was in March, Machala said.

Contacted by phone Wednesday evening, Public Health nurse Debbie Hieb said the Health Department office in the Minidoka County Courthouse immunized about 100 children Wednesday. She said there was still a line outside the office at 6 p.m. and the Health Department would continue to give inoculations for another hour.

She said measles inoculation would be available at the usual Monday clinic at the Burley Health Department. Machala said Wednesday evening the Health Department would decide today whether or not to plan more inoculation clinics.

Health Department officials had spotted two more possible cases Wednesday, Hieb said.

Machala said the strain of measles plaguing Minidoka school children is not rubella. Rubella has been linked with birth defects in the children of mothers contracting rubella.

Bounced big checks

Hutton listened when rural bank blew whistle

By PETER COY
The Associated Press

LEROY, N.Y. — E.F. Hutton & Co. Inc.'s fraudulent cash-management scheme, involving billions of dollars nationwide, began to come apart 3½ years ago when it dealt with the tiny Genesee Country Bank.

Ignoring Hutton's prestige, the rural bank bounced $21 million worth of uncovered Hutton checks in one hectic week in December 1981.

Then the bankers tipped off authorities, triggering a probe that resulted last week in 2,000 felony counts of mail and wire fraud against the nation's fifth-largest brokerage house.

Hutton pleaded guilty to what the government said amounted to a $4.35 billion scheme in which it wrote checks in excess of deposits it had in about 400 commercial banks.

High finance was so unfamiliar to Genesee Country Bank that when Hutton submitted its first $8 million check, the internal auditor for the bank's holding company assumed that a clerk had mistakenly added several extra zeroes on the end.

"It seemed almost ludicrous at the time to report on E.F. Hutton, but I did," John Lounsbury, the auditor, said this week in the first interview the bank has granted on the subject.

Genesee blew the whistle on a cash management practice that other banks had not noticed, had let slide, or had dealt with in secret, the Justice Department says.

"If it wasn't for that little bank's complaining, we would have possibly never uncovered this scheme," Albert Murray, the assistant U.S. attorney who led the prosecution, said by telephone from Scranton, Pa.

"How many banks are going to accuse E.F. Hutton of doing something wrong?" Murray asked. "They're a large corporation, and a case like this has never been prosecuted before."

Hutton's scheme gave it interest-free use of up to $250 million a day, the government said. Investigators said it involved writing checks against deposits before the checks creating the deposits cleared.

Headquartered in the village of LeRoy, 25 miles southwest of Rochester, Genesee did most of its business with dairy, corn and wheat farmers. It had assets of about $50 million and four small branches, including the one in nearby Batavia where Hutton opened an account around Dec. 1, 1981.

Included in Hutton's deposits were checks drawn on banks in Pennsylvania.

Between Dec. 1 and Dec. 11, 1981, Hutton attempted to withdraw $35.4 million, said Lounsbury, who was auditor of Security New York State Corp. at the time.

The huge movements of cash puzzled bank officials, who had been told Hutton's account was only for its business around Batavia.

The Genesee Country bankers made some phone calls and found that Hutton's accounts in the Pennsylvania banks didn't have enough money in hand to cover the checks.

Genesee honored what it felt were legitimate checks for Hutton's Batavia-area business, Lounsbury said, but it refused to honor an additional $21 million of Hutton's checks.

does not include off-farm income, which pushed total farm family earnings to $29,048.

Sixty-six percent said they believe the days of the family-owned farm are numbered, and that they eventually will be replaced by big agribusiness.

Among major disadvantages the public sees in farming, according to the poll, are difficulty in making a living, 22 percent, and the uncertainties of weather in raising crops, 19 percent.

A factor heard frequently from farmers themselves — the low prices received for crops — was cited by 11 percent of the public. Other frequently mentioned drawbacks were inflation in prices of fertilizer, fuel and other supplies, along with grueling work and long hours.

Those interviewed generally mentioned few advantages to farming. Seventeen percent said being your own boss was a plus, and 13 percent said they thought farmers were more self-sufficient when it comes to food. Ten percent said farmers have a lot of freedom.

When it comes to government policy toward farmers, nearly half of the respondents said federal aid was indequate. But 58 percent said farms would be more efficient if federal price supports were removed altogether.

Seventy-three percent said current government policies help only big farms and not "family-size" farms. And 77 percent said farmers often receive less for their crops under current conditions than it costs to produce them.

Food processors were blamed by the most respondents,— 26 percent — for increases in food prices. Another 23 percent blamed the government, and 33 percent said federal payments to farmers cause higher food prices. The farmer was singled out as the cause of higher food costs by just 3 percent of those interviewed.

People also showed high levels of concern about environmental aspects of farming, with a majority saying modern farming methods are environmentally harmful.

(the division of Europe) would not have taken place," Weizsaecker said. He called the end of the war a "day of liberation" for Germany.

Reagan told the European Parliament in Strasbourg, France, that the Soviets were trying to "spread their dominance by force" and said Moscow was developing multiwarhead mobile missiles that could not be monitored for arms control.

"The Soviet Union is undermining stability and the basis for mutual deterrence," Reagan said.

At a televised Kremlin ceremony, Gorbachev said America had revived a "malicious myth" about the Soviet military threat. He said American capitalists had reaped fortunes from the war and the Cold War that followed.

"Foremost among the military threats to mankind is American militarism," he said.

Gorbachev paid tribute to U.S., British and French soldiers who fought the Nazis, and to resistance guerrillas, but added, "We are proud to say that the outcome of the war was decided on the Soviet-German front." He said victory shows that "our social system is invincible."

The Soviets held a military parade in Red Square today.

A delegation of West Germany's anti-NATO Greens party laid a wreath at Auschwitz death camp in Poland in memory of the millions killed by the Nazis.

Laughter and jubilation prevailed at street parties around Britain as people recalled the relief and joy when Prime Minister Winston Churchill announced on May 8, 1945, that fighting in Europe would end one minute after midnight.

He reminded Britons that Japan had yet to be defeated, but allowed they could revel in "a brief period of rejoicing."

Queen Elizabeth II, recalled in a British Broadcasting Corp. interview how as a 19-year-old princess, she and her sister Margaret stood on the balcony of Buckingham Palace with their parents King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

She said she and Margaret went down into the crowds to get a better feel for the occasion.

"We . . . walked miles through the streets. I remember miles of unknown people linking arms and walking down Whitehall, all of us just swept along on a tide of happiness and relief," she recalled.

An ecumenical service was held at Westminster Abbey attended by the queen; her husband Prince Philip, a wartime naval officer, and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. A congregation of 2,200 in the 450-year-old abbey included men and women who distinguished themselves during the war, and he West and East German ambassadors among the foreign envoys.

In Paris, President Francois Mitterrand, a wartime resistance fighter, reviewed a display of battle flags of all the French armed forces on the Champs Elysees, and 200 young West German guests mixed with veterans marching up the broad avenue to the Tomb of the Unknown Warrior under the Arch of Triumph.

Soviet soldiers killed in the war were honored in ceremonies on both sides of divided Berlin. East German President Erich Honecker laid a wreath at the Soviet war memorial in Treptow, near East Berlin, and Soviet military officers laid a wreath at a Soviet war monument in West Berlin.

In Norway, which was occupied by Adolf Hitler's troops from April 9, 1940, to May 8, 1945, 82-year-old King Olav V laid a wreath at the National War Memorial in Oslo — one of hundreds of such ceremonies in the nation.

Foreign guests included British Maj. Gen. Robert E. Urquhart, who had commanded the 1st Airborne "Red Devils" Division — the first Allied force to arrive in Norway at the end of the war.

Brazil, the only Latin American to send troops to the European front, also marked the anniversary, with ceremonies in Rio de Janeiro at the monument to the 454 Brazilians killed in action. Brazil sent 25,334 troops to fight on the Allied side in Italy in 1944 and 1945.

Synthetic prose malodorous, sign of age, lecturer declares

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Thomas Jefferson came back to modern-day America, he'd be delighted with the machinery but dismayed by the neglect of literature and by writing that emits "the authentic stink of the synthetic prose of a technological age," an honored scholar told official Washington on Wednesday night.

Cleanth Brooks, professor emeritus of rhetoric at Yale University, declared that the state of learning in America "amounts to a disaster, and one of Pearl Harbor dimensions."

Brooks cited studies that show four 17-year-olds in 10 cannot comprehend ordinary documents, 23 million adults are functionally illiterate and only 20 percent of high school seniors can write a coherent essay.

Brooks, 78, a native of Murray, Ky., is the author of textbooks which introduced generations of Americans to prose and poetry.

The lecture is delivered to an invited audience of dignitaries — tickets are much sought-after — and the selection of the lecturer by the National Council of the National Endowment for the Humanities amounts to the highest honor conferred each year by the federal government for achievement in the humanities. The speaker gets a $10,000 stipend.

"I shall have to be blunt," Brooks said in his text. "Neither reading nor writing flourishes in our blessed United States . . . in important respects, we are an illiterate nation. A large section of our population cannot read at all, and many of those who can read do not read books."

"The humanities cannot be eliminated from our culture, but they can be debased," Brooks said. "They cannot be eliminated because as long as mankind remains human, his yearning for the song, the story and the drama cannot be suppressed.

"People are interested in accounts of human behavior, in suspense and conflict of interest, in the expression of emotion, in motivation. If they don't have Shakespeare or Jane Austen to read, they will read something far less rewarding, too often utter trash....

"When the true muses retire from the scene, the bastard muses are ready to take over.

"Their names are Propaganda, Sentimentality and Pornography. The shared trait that proves their sisterhood is this: all three are bent on distorting the human dimension.

"Propaganda does so by pleading, sometimes unscrupulously, for a special cause or issue at the expense of total truth. Sentimentality does so by working up emotional responses unwarranted by and in excess of the occasion. Pornography does so by focusing upon one powerful human drive at the expense of the total human personality.

"In short, they offer partial and biased accounts of life in its fullness. Their productions do not nourish, but are debilitating."

Northern Utah and Nevada:
Utah — Warm and windy with scattered thundershowers today. Cooler tonight, with a few lingering showers or thundershowers. Fair to partly cloudy and cooler Friday. Lows in the 40s tonight. Highs today 75 to 90 cooling into the 70s and low 80s Friday.

Nevada — Partly cloudy today. Mostly sunny Friday. Continued windy and cool. Overnight lows upper 20s and 30s. Highs today mid-50s and 60s and Friday mostly in the 60s.

Synopsis:
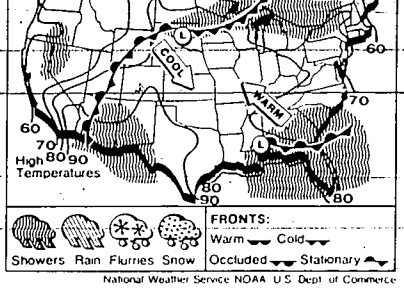
Late Wednesday afternoon skies across Idaho were partly cloudy to cloudy.

Most temperatures were in the 60s and 70s except in northern Idaho, where temperatures were in the 40s. Windy conditions were reported at some southeastern Idaho stations.

The pollen count in Twin Falls Wednesday was 112 particles per cubic meter of air.



National Weather Service NOAA U.S. Dept of Commerce

The extended forecast for Southern Idaho, Saturday through Monday, calls for a chance of showers in the northern mountains Saturday, otherwise fair and warmer. Highs low to mid 60s Saturday and mid 60s to mid 70s Sunday and Monday. Lows in the 30s to low 40s.

The agricultural outlook in Southern Idaho from today through Monday shows conditions for field work and planting will remain good through the period. A few delays may be possible due to showers today. Total rainfall over the next five days will be .10 inch or less. Mean four-inch soil temperatures will cool 1 to 3 degrees by Friday, then warm 1 to 3 degrees over the weekend. Evaporation rates will show little change through Friday, then increase by .10 inch over the weekend. Winds for spraying will be southwest to northwest 10 to 15 mph both today and Friday.

House committee approves 'freeze' in U.S. defense funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Armed Services Committee approved a 1986 Pentagon spending plan Wednesday which provides no increase in defense spending apart from inflation, and includes cuts in military retirement and MX nuclear missiles, sources said.

The panel also voted for new U.S. chemical weapons and ordered the Air Force to referee a competition between two jet fighters next year with an eye toward buying both planes in the future, said the sources, speaking on condition they not be identified.

The decisions came in votes during closed sessions as the panel finished two days of work. No votes were announced.

The panel authorized the Pentagon to spend $304.5 billion next year, the sources said, which provides no increase apart from a 4 percent rise to account for expected inflation.

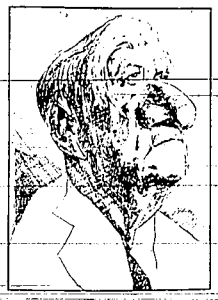
President Reagan originally requested a 5.9 percent hike over inflation, to a total of $313.7 billion.

The package now goes to the floor of the Democratic-controlled House and whatever finally is approved there will have to be reconciled in a conference committee with the version passed by the Republican-controlled Senate.

The Senate, working on an overall budget bill, has also tentatively approved a "freeze" in defense spending, but has yet to take up the issue of authorized Pentagon spending.

The House panel, ignoring a warning from Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, voted to slash $4 billion from the $18.2 billion the Pentagon had requested be set aside in fiscal 1986 for military pensions, the sources said.

But the panel accepted an amendment proposed by Rep. Bill Nichols, D-Ala., which would phase in major changes in the retirement system over a four-year period rather than permitting sharp reductions in benefits, the sources said.



TIP O'NEILL
'A symbolic victory'

O'Neill sees Contra vote shift

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said Wednesday that political shifts in the Democratic House may have changed enough votes to give President Reagan a "symbolic victory" on non-military aid to the rebels in Nicaragua.

The Nicaragua aid issue could be brought up for new debate as early as next week, and efforts are under way to find some Nicaraguan aid formula which would overcome the opposition of O'Neill, D-Mass., and most of the Democratic majority in the House.

One such effort was led by about 20 moderate and conservative Democrats along with some House Republicans, including GOP Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi.

One of the 20, Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., a member of the House Intelligence Committee, has proposed legislation giving the Contra rebels $14 million in non-lethal aid delivered through the U.S. Agency for International Development, not the CIA.

McCurdy's measure also would urge Reagan to resume direct negotiations with the leftist Sandinista government in Managua and pressure its leaders to talk with the Contras.

A key issue dividing the administration and those seeking a compromise aid package is whether any new law should include a flat prohibition against the use of U.S. funds for military or paramilitary purposes by the Contras.

Congress has previously approved such limits, but some Republicans believe the trip to Moscow by Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega last week may have changed enough minds in Congress to lift the so-called Boland amendment, named after the original sponsor of the idea, Rep. Edward P. Boland, D-Mass.

Lott predicted Wednesday that the fight on the House floor would focus on a renewed Boland amendment.

Two weeks ago, the House rejected both a Republican aid plan providing $14 million in humantarian aid and a Democratic alternative providing assistance to refugees to be provided through the United Nations or the International Red Cross.

Paul Thayer sent to prison

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paul Thayer, former deputy secretary of defense, was sentenced to four years in prison and fined $5,000 Wednesday for lying to the Securities and Exchange Commission during an investigation of his insider stock trading.

U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey, who could have given Thayer five years in prison, said he was imposing the stiff sentence to deter others who might consider committing "white-collar crimes" and "to maintain the integrity of the system of justice in the United States."

The judge imposed the same sentence on Dallas stockbroker Billy Bob Harris, a close friend of Thayer. The defendants paid the fines immediately after the sentencing, and the judge ordered that they surrender to the U.S. Bureau of Prisons in Texas by Monday afternoon.

Robert B. Fiske Jr. and Judah Best, attorneys for Thayer and Harris, respectively, pleaded with Richey to place the pair on probation and order them to perform community service.

Poll

does not include off-farm income, which pushed total farm family earnings to $29,048.

Sixty-six percent said they believe the days of the family-owned farm are numbered, and that they eventually will be replaced by big agribusiness.

Among major disadvantages the public sees in farming, according to the poll, are difficulty in making a living, 22 percent, and the uncertainties of weather in raising crops, 19 percent.

A factor heard frequently from farmers themselves — the low prices received for crops — was cited by 11 percent of the public. Other frequently mentioned drawbacks were inflation in prices of fertilizer, fuel and other supplies, along with grueling and long work hours.

Those interviewed generally mentioned few advantages to farming. Seventeen percent said being your own boss was a plus, and 13 percent said they thought farmers were more self-sufficient when it comes to food. Ten percent said farmers have a lot of freedom.

When it comes to government policy toward farmers, nearly half of the respondents said federal aid was indequate. But 58 percent said farms would be more efficient if federal price supports were removed altogether.

Seventy-three percent said current government policies help only big farms and not "family-size" farms. And 77 percent said farmers often receive less for their crops under current conditions than it costs to produce them.

Food processors were blamed by the most respondents — 26 percent — for increases in food prices. Another 23 percent blamed the government, and 33 percent said federal payments to farmers cause higher food prices. The farmer was singled out as the cause of higher food costs by just 3 percent of those interviewed.

People also showed high levels of concern about environmental aspects of farming, with a majority saying modern farming methods are environmentally harmful.

Synthetic prose malodorous, sign of age, lecturer declares

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Thomas Jefferson came back to modern-day America, he'd be delighted with the machinery but dismayed by the neglect of literature and by writing that emits "the authentic stink of the synthetic prose of a technological age," an honored scholar told official Washington on Wednesday night.

Cleanth Brooks, professor emeritus of rhetoric at Yale University, declared that the state of learning in America "amounts to a disaster, and one of Pearl Harbor dimensions."

Brooks cited studies that show four 17-year-olds in 10 cannot comprehend ordinary documents, 23 million adults are functionally illiterate and only 20 percent of high school seniors can write a coherent essay.

Brooks, 78, a native of Murray, Ky., is the author of textbooks which introduced generations of Americans to prose and poetry.

The lecture is delivered to an invited audience of dignitaries — tickets are much sought-after — and the selection of the lecturer by the National Council of the National Endowment for the Humanities amounts to the highest honor conferred each year by the federal government for achievement in the humanities. The speaker gets a $10,000 stipend.

"I shall have to be blunt," Brooks said in his text. "Neither reading nor writing flourishes in our blessed United States . . . In important respects, we are an illiterate nation. A large section of our population cannot read at all, and many of those who can read do not read books."

"The humanities cannot be eliminated from our culture, but they can be debased," Brooks said. "They cannot be eliminated because as long as mankind remains human, his yearning for the song, the story and the drama cannot be suppressed.

"People are interested in accounts of human behavior in suspense and conflict of interest, in the expression of emotion, in motivation. If they don't have Shakespeare or Jane Austen to read, they will read something far less rewarding, too often utter trash....

"When the true muses retire from the scene, the bastard muses are ready to take over.

"Their names are Propaganda, Sentimentality and Pornography. The shared trait that proves their sisterhood is this: all three are bent on distorting the human dimension.

"Propaganda does so by pleading, sometimes unscrupulously, for a special cause or issue at the expense of total truth. Sentimentality does so by working up emotional responses unwarranted by and in excess of the occasion. Pornography does so by focusing upon one powerful human drive at the expense of the total human personality.

"In short, they offer partial and biased accounts of life in its fullness. Their productions do not nourish, but are debilitating."

(the division of Europe) would not have taken place," Weizsaecker said. He called the end of the war a "day of liberation" for Germany.

Reagan told the European Parliament in Strasbourg, France, that the Soviets were trying to "spread their dominance by force" and said Moscow was developing multiwarhead mobile missiles that could not be monitored for arms control.

"The Soviet Union is undermining stability and the basis for mutual deterrence," Reagan said.

At a televised Kremlin ceremony, Gorbachev said America had revived a "malicious myth" about the Soviet military threat. He said American capitalists had reaped fortunes from the war and the Cold War that followed.

"Foremost among the military threats to mankind is American militarism," he said.

Gorbachev paid tribute to U.S., British and French soldiers who fought the Nazis, and to resistance guerrillas, but added, "We are proud to say that the outcome of the war was decided on the Soviet-German front." He said victory shows that "our social system is invincible."

The Soviets held a military parade in Red Square today.

A delegation of West Germany's anti-NATO Greens party laid a wreath at Auschwitz death camp in Poland in memory of the millions killed by the Nazis.

Laughter and jubilation prevailed at street parties around Britain as people recalled the relief and joy when Prime Minister Winston Churchill announced on May 8, 1945, that fighting in Europe would end one minute after midnight.

He reminded Britons that Japan had yet to be defeated, but allowed they could revel in "a brief period of rejoicing."

Queen Elizabeth II, recalled in a British Broadcasting Corp. interview how as a 19-year-old princess, she and her sister Margaret stood on the balcony of Buckingham Palace with their parents King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

She said she and Margaret went down into the crowds to get a better feel for the occasion.

"We . . . walked miles through the streets, I remember miles of unknown people linking arms and walking down Whitehall, all of us just swept along on a tide of happiness and relief," she recalled.

An ecumenical service was held at Westminster Abbey attended by the queen; her husband Prince Philip, a wartime naval officer, and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. A congregation of 2,200 in the 450-year-old abbey included men and women who distinguished themselves during the war, and he West and East German ambassadors among the foreign envoys.

In Paris, President Francois Mitterrand, a wartime resistance fighter, reviewed a display of battle flags of all the French armed forces on the Champs Elysees, and 200 young West German guests mixed with veterans marching up the broad avenue to the Tomb of the Unknown Warrior under the Arch of Triumph.

Soviet soldiers killed in the war were honored in ceremonies on both sides of divided Berlin. East German President Erich Honecker laid a wreath at the Soviet war memorial in Treptow, near East Berlin, and Soviet military officers laid a wreath at a Soviet war monument in West Berlin.

In Norway, which was occupied by Adolf Hitler's troops from April 9, 1940, to May 8, 1945, 82-year-old King Olav V laid a wreath at the National War Memorial in Oslo — one of hundreds of such ceremonies in the nation.

Foreign guests included British Maj. Gen. Robert E. Urquhart, who had commanded the 1st Airborne "Red Devils" Division — the first Allied force to arrive in Norway at the end of the war.

Brazil, the only Latin American to send troops to the European front, also marked the anniversary, with ceremonies in Rio de Janeiro at the monument to the 454 Brazilians killed in action. Brazil sent 25,334 troops to fight on the Allied side in Italy in 1944 and 1945.

Today's weather

Partly cloudy, perhaps even a shower

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding:

Partly cloudy today and Friday with slight chance of a shower or thundershower. Highs today 68 to 70 and Friday mid-60s. Lows tonight mid-30s.

Camas Prarie, Hailey, Lower Woodriver Valley:

Partly cloudy today and Friday with widely scattered showers and chance of a thundershower. Highs today mid-60s and Friday 60 to 65. Lows tonight upper 20s to upper 30s.

Northern Utah and Nevada:

Utah — Warm and windy with scattered thundershowers today. Cooler tonight, with a few lingering showers or thundershowers. Fair to partly cloudy and cooler Friday. Lows in the 40s tonight. Highs today 75 to 90 cooling into the 70s and low 80s Friday.

Nevada — Partly cloudy today. Mostly sunny Friday. Continued windy and cool. Overnight lows upper 20s and 30s. Highs today mid-50s and 60s and Friday mostly in the 60s.

Synopsis:

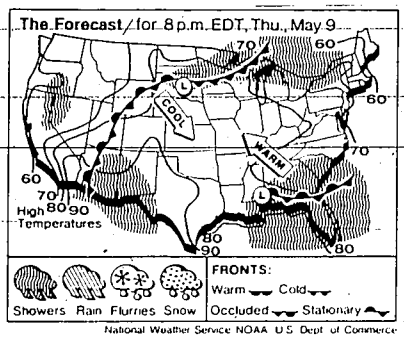
Late Wednesday afternoon skies across Idaho were partly cloudy to cloudy.

Most temperatures were in the 60s and 70s except in northern Idaho, where temperatures were in the 40s. Windy conditions were reported at some southeastern Idaho stations.

The pollen count in Twin Falls Wednesday was 112 particles per cubic meter of air.



National Weather Service NOAA U.S. Dept. of Commerce

The extended forecast for Southern Idaho, Saturday through Monday, calls for a chance of showers in the northern mountains Saturday, otherwise fair and warmer. Highs low to mid 60s Saturday and mid 60s to mid 70s Sunday and Monday. Lows in the 30s to low 40s.

The agricultural outlook in Southern Idaho from today through Monday shows conditions for field work and planting will remain good through the period. A few delays may be possible due to showers today. Total rainfall over the next five days will be .10 inch or less. Mean four-inch soil temperatures will cool 1 to 3 degrees by Friday, then warm 1 to 3 degrees over the weekend. Evaporation rates will show little change through Friday, then increase by .10 inch over the weekend. Winds for spraying will be southwest to northwest 10 to 15 mph both today and Friday.

House committee approves 'freeze' in U.S. defense funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Armed Services Committee approved a 1986 Pentagon spending plan Wednesday which provides no increase in defense spending apart from inflation, and includes cuts in military retirement and MX nuclear missiles, sources said.

The panel also voted for new U.S. chemical weapons and ordered the Air Force to referee a competition between two jet fighters next year with an eye toward buying both planes in the future, said the sources, speaking on condition they not be identified.

The decisions came in votes during closed sessions as the panel finished two days of work. No votes were announced.

The panel authorized the Pentagon to spend $304.5 billion next year, the sources said, which provides no increase apart from a 4 percent rise to account for expected inflation.

President Reagan originally requested a 5.9 percent hike over inflation, to a total of $313.7 billion.

The package now goes to the floor of the Democratic-controlled House and whatever finally is approved there will have to be reconciled in a conference committee with the version passed by the Republican-controlled Senate.

The Senate, working on an overall budget bill, has also tentatively approved a "freeze" in defense spending, but has yet to take up the issue of authorized Pentagon spending.

The House panel, ignoring a warning from Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, voted to slash $4 billion from the $18.2 billion the Pentagon had requested be set aside in fiscal 1986 for military pensions, the sources said.

But the panel accepted an amendment proposed by Rep. Bill Nichols, D-Ala., which would phase in major changes in the retirement system over a four-year period rather than permitting sharp reductions in benefits, the sources said.

TIP O'NEILL

O'Neill sees Contra vote shift

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said Wednesday that political shifts in the Democratic House may have changed enough votes to give President Reagan a "symbolic victory" on non-military aid to the rebels in Nicaragua.

The Nicaragua aid issue could be brought up for new debate as early as next week, and efforts are under way to find some Nicaraguan aid formula which would overcome the opposition of O'Neill, D-Mass., and most of the Democratic majority in the House.

One such effort was led by about 20 moderate and conservative Democrats along with some House Republicans, including GOP Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi.

One of the 20, Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., a member of the House Intelligence Committee, has proposed legislation giving the Contra rebels $14 million in non-lethal aid delivered through the U.S. Agency for International Development, not the CIA.

McCurdy's measure also would urge Reagan to resume direct negotiations with the leftist Sandinista government in Managua and pressure its leaders to talk with the Contras.

A key issue dividing the administration and those seeking a compromise aid package is whether any new law should include a flat prohibition against the use of U.S. funds for military or paramilitary purposes by the Contras.

Lott predicted Wednesday that the fight on the House floor would focus on a renewed Boland amendment.

Two weeks ago, the House rejected both a Republican aid plan providing $14 million in humanitarian aid and a Democratic alternative providing assistance to refugees to be provided through the United Nations or the International Red Cross.

Teacher has a role in American society

Proclamations come and pass with numbing regularity these days, but a current one shouldn't go by unnoticed: Teacher Appreciation Week.

Teachers are easy to take for granted. They babysit our kids, give them knowledge which is often accepted reluctantly if at all, and pass along far more of American society's shared values than many parents would like to admit.

They are not, despite the propaganda and rhetoric of some organizations, an oppressed class of American workers, but they are sorely unappreciated for their long hours and duties beyond the classroom.

It is an easy and currently-popular sport to knock the American teacher, particularly among some people who ought to know better, like some state legislators.

But how many of us would last more than an hour with a room of 28 fifth graders? How many of us would have the persistence to continue in a job which routinely demands hours and hours of evening time grading stacks of papers?

Teachers are not superhuman. They do not walk on water. No teacher can perform miracles, particularly with children who don't want to learn.

But in the right environment — that is, in a school with adequate resources, with children who want to learn — a dedicated teacher can make an enormous difference in a young person's life.

It is that spark which good teachers provide. And it is that spark which we all ought to remember this week, national Teacher Appreciation Week in both Idaho and the nation.

Among the great founding documents of the country, in addition to the Declaration and the Constitution, was the Northwest Ordinance of 1785 and 1787, which established how new states would be admitted to the union and how sections of land would be set aside for the benefit of public schools.

Its authors, including Thomas Jefferson, knew full well that without an educated populace — and by the way, a free press — American democracy could not work.

Next to the parent, the teacher is the key person in that equation. We ought to remember that this spring as schools end across the valley and the nation and our children return to us after another year of schooling.

Armed forces offer women opportunity

James Kilpatrick

CHARLESTON, S.C. — The U.S.S. Sierra rests comfortably at the naval base here in Charleston, moored most of the time to Pier Papa.

She is a motherly old girl who has been tending naval ships for more than 40 years. The Sierra is 531 feet long and 73 feet at her generous beam — not nearly so dashing as the destroyer John Rogers nearby — and to the casual visitor she is just one more ship in the fleet.

But the casual visitor blinks. Who are those sailors chipping paint? Who are the two crew members with welding torches? Who is the tall blond navigator at the quartermaster's charts?

Women, that's who. Three of Sierra's 35 officers and 100 of her 811 enlisted personnel are women. The tall blond is Laura Booher, 27, of Cincinnati, who came into the Navy in 1982 and just signed on for another hitch.

Some interesting things are happening to the armed services. Once they relegated women to billets as nurses or clerical workers. Today women constitute about 10 percent of total personnel — 76,000 in the Army, 66,000 in the Air Force, 48,600 in the Navy, 9,000 in the Marines. The law still prohibits women from serving in combat, but short of combat they are doing almost everything else.

The Navy's experience goes back to the formation of the U.S. Navy Nurse Corps in 1908. During World War I, 11,000 "yeomanettes" served at shore stations. World War II saw the Women's Auxiliary Reserve, better known as the WAVES. They numbered 86,000 at peak strength, but within months after the war ended the women's reserve was virtually disbanded. Then interest in women's role revived; the 1970s brought a widespread movement toward women's liberation, and the Navy saw an opportunity to strike a blow for progress.

Today the Navy counts in its enlisted ranks almost 42,000 young women like Laura Booher. Born in northern Kentucky, she completed high school, served for a time as waitress, took a course in dental technology, and went to work in Cincinnati as a dentist's assistant.

She doesn't want to knock dentistry, but at 24 she was bored and restless and curious about a world that was wider than right and left molars. She talked to a Navy recruiter. He promised her a chance to earn a rating as a meteorologist. She held up her hand, and went off to Orlando for nine weeks of basic.

Those nine weeks were followed by two months of training in Illinois and by a 15-month assignment to a weather station on Guam. She loved it. Then came assignment to the Sierra in Charleston, where she learned the additional skills of navigation. This month she takes on a new assignment in Suitland, Md., where she will be working oceanography. She is a petty officer, second class, with a base pay of $11,748 a year — plus perks. It beats bleuspids.

The Navy now has women in scores of ratings ashore and at sea. Roughly 6,000 enlisted women are in naval aviation. Thirty-four ships include women officers. Women are serving on repair ships such as the Sierra; they are serving on ordnance disposal teams; they are manning air traffic control positions; they are serving as lawyers, doctors, nurses, cooks and technicians.

There are problems. Some women join the Navy primarily to get away from home, or to get a husband. Some of them get homesick and some get pregnant. No matter how everyone is exhorted to "think team," a sexual tension is always present. Aboard ship few women can handle the heavy weights that go with taking on stores. The Navy has not asked Congress to repeal the law that prohibits the permanent assignment of women to warships. Not all things are equal.

Yet the future is bright for women in service. The pool of 18- to 22-year-old males is dwindling at the same time the Navy is tightening its requirements for intelligence and character. The Navy is competing for the same high school and college graduates that the private sector wants, and no one in the private sector has to serve watch or sleep in a three-tiered bunk.

If the armed services are to be kept at full strength in these competitive times, such incentives as a pay raise must be offered, or strength levels must be reduced. A third alternative is to enlarge the role for women. It's going to happen.

Renaissance needs help

Are young people so stupefied by extravagant television mediocrity and so lethargic from all the sitting and snacking that goes with it, that the charm of good live performance is no longer appealing to them?

Or are adults so busy with their own activities that they don't take the time to introduce them to "hands on" activities or to the total involvement that is such an exciting part of live chamber music and theatre, which seem to be slipping down "the tube."

It is common knowledge that a well rounded and educated individual is not only academically mature, but has the balance that an appreciation for and understanding of the arts provides him.

It is also common knowledge that the cultural climate of a community affects its economic base. Companies looking for expansion are not looking in large cities often. They want smaller towns, but ones with cultural opportunities which attract quality employees. Magic Valley is an ideal place to build a cultural environment, but it needs enough feeling of community pride in every person who appreciates the arts to make it happen.

The Renaissance Academy of the Arts is a volunteer organization which has been trying to provide opportunities for young people to grow culturally. The building is a small facility with excellent accoustics and a marvelous concert grand piano, ideal for chamber performance.

It's board of directors needs ideas and help in a variety of ways. Anyone interested in helping our community in developing the arts is welcome to attend a meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Academy at 505 2nd Ave. East, or by calling and leaving your number at 734-0719.

Pentagon budget is too big

Congress is beginning to move on the fiscal year 1986 defense authorization bill and that means it is time for concerned citizens to act by writing or calling their congressmen.

The first point to mention is that the Pentagon budget is too big. Reagan has requested $313.7 billion for 1986. That is more than a 78 percent increase since Reagan first took office. The Pentagon budget authority for 1986-90 is $2 trillion, which translates into a $32,031 "contribution" from every one of the 61,997,000 American families to the Pentagon.

This skyrocketing increase in defense spending is coupled with decreases in almost all other government programs, including a 42 percent decrease in agriculture, a 88 percent decrease in energy conservation grants, and a 99 percent decrease in community service.

The 1986 military budget does nothing to contribute to deficit reduction, instead it is fueling increases in the deficit.

The first place to cut the defense budget is in Reagan's star wars program. The president has requested $3.7 billion for his strategic defense initiative (SDI) program. This constitutes a 160 percent increase over the 1985 level of $1.4 billion. The president plans to spend $60 billion for SDI through 1993! That is a phenomenal sum of money out of our pockets and it is to be used on a program, the purpose of which is still unclear.

Experts have rejected as infeasible the president's vision of a perfect "astrodome" defense over the nation. The SDI program will provide little civilian protection, while threatening to destroy the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty and launding the superpowers into a military rivalry in space. Congress should reject the president's SDI proposal as misguided and dangerous.

Write or call your congressmen and ask them to support or co-sponsor amendments which freeze SDI spending at 1985 levels or decrease it. In the Senate ask Symms and McClure to support the Kerry amendment which freezes SDI spending at $1.4 billion. Make it clear that defense spending is too high.

Correction on Ralphs letter

The Times-News incorrectly transcribed part of a letter Wednesday from William Ralphs. Ralphs' letter said "In the same courageous manner as concerned and angry citizens have banded together to fight against pornography in Twin Falls, we must have a group which will join the battle against incompetent mothers." The Times-News regrets the error.

Castleford Men's Club seeks reconstruction of crossing

Guest opinion
Jack Wiggs

The Castleford Men's Club seeks your assistance in expediting an adequate reconstruction of the Balanced Rock crossing.

The history of this important crossing is as follows. In 1969 the spring run-off washed out the grade (culvert pipe too small). In 1979 the run-off water rose within two feet of breaching the road before it subsided.

In 1984, for the first time in about 80 years, Salmon Dam had to spill excess water (reported spill about 2,800 cu. sec. ft.) and the grade washed out as the pipe was simply too small to handle the volume of water.

As of April 29, 1985, the temporary pipe is carrying 95 percent of capacity and Salmon Dam is reported to be spilling only 200 cu. sec. ft. of water. With 61 percent of snow melt yet to come down, there is fear that the present pipe will not be able to handle the water in the next twenty days.

Last year the paper-chase was set in motion by the Twin Falls and Buhl Highway Departments, to the local Idaho Transportation Department, which forwarded the design application to the state office, which, in turn sent it over to the Federal Highway Administration, state level, at Boise.

Mr. Richard C. Cowdery's department forwarded the application to the Federal Highway Administration office in Portland. Mr. Gene Fiala turned down the design application, and seems to have returned the papers to Mr. Cowdery in Boise, where they are hung up. And this is only the paper-chase of the design phase.

It appears that Mr. Gene Fiala in the Portland office rejected the hydraulics report of the local field engineers, who call for a pipe to handle a 100 year flood at 3400 cu. sec. ft. Federal specifications call only for 1000 cu. sec. ft. pipe.

We point out the loss already of two road fills and inadequate pipes, and the possible loss of a third in the next weeks. We point out that many lawsuits in court stemming from last year's disaster.

We note the loss of tourist dollars from those who would like to visit Balanced Rock. We add the loss to the farmers west of the crossing and the loss to the suppliers of services to those farmers. The crossing is also a school bus route and it is also the road to the Buhl Highway District's main source of gravel which, because of the steepness of the temporary grade and/or no road at all, the Buhl Highway District is severely hampered in carrying out their normal working capacity.

Finally, we add the loss incurred by cattle and sheep men who, when the crossing is out, must detour 45 miles, one way.

According to our local highway departments, the present amount of the emergency fund allocated to the reconstruction is actually enough to raise the grade to the former level, with adequate pipe. It may be said that local highway departments have other options. We are assured that our two departments do not have funds for design modifications, what with inflation and the 1 percent tax sturcture, there is simply no way locally to generate funds to ensure an adequate pipe and reconstructed grade.

Once again may we ask for your aid in cutting the red tape, expediting the reconstruction of this important Balanced Rock crossing with adequate pipe. It is time to end this waste of tax money by bureaucratic engineers who do not understand the local hydraulics, have never visited the site, and who insist on pipes too small to handle the volume of spring run-offs.

If you have questions, we of the Men's Club will be glad to respond. If you are in the area, we'd be delighted to have you visit us, and the Balanced Rock crossing west of Castleford.

Socialism may be causing more backaches among French

George Will

PARIS — The French, who politicize everything from industry to poetry, suddenly are having a lot of backaches, and socialism may be to blame.

Polls show that since 1981 the percentage of people who say they are increasingly irritable has risen from 26 to 42 percent, the prevalence of backaches has increased substantially, as has the number of people who say they expect to be in an automobile accident. A decline in the nation's sense of well-being has coincided with the floundering of the first Socialist government under the Fifth Republic.

Four years ago this month, France elected Francois Mitterrand president and embarked on a historic journey in Europe's experience, a journey to the end of the line for socialism. Mitterrand, who once criticized Sweden's socialists for not dealing capitalism "a mortal blow," has dealt one to socialism.

In the 1981 campaign, he promised stimulative spending through expanded entitlements, a shorter work week with no cut in pay, job creation through public-works spending, steeper taxes on the wealthy, sweeping nationalization of many industries and banks, and an attack on the independence of Catholic schools. Then he rounded on the country and began keeping his promises.

Because France listens intently to intellectuals, it often is late learning the obvious. It has now learned that much of the money pumped into the pockets of people who are working less was spent on imports. So while productivity fell, demand rose and the franc fell, unemployment rose, the purchasing power of the employed fell, and so did Mitterrand in the polls, to a point lower than any postwar leader.

His biggest blunder was a bill to break Catholic schools to the state's saddle. The bill embodied traditional socialist thinking about conquering reactionary tendencies by nationalizing consciousness, and liberating children from the dead hand of the past, including parents. This brought a million protesters into Paris streets in the largest demonstration since Liberation.

Mitterrand promised radicalism and in two years he has delivered perhaps the most radical reversal in recent European history, imposing budgetary austerity more severe than Reagan has proposed. Candidate Mitterrand exhorted, "Let's break with the logic of profitability," and under his policies many businesses, alas, did. President Mitterrand now says, "We can no longer keep on crushing those who create wealth in France with taxes and social contributions."

He insists his conversion to tax cuts and spending restraints is just a "parenthesis" in the story of French socialism. But the parenthesis was preceded by failure so complete that the intellectual cupboard is barren of ideas about what can come next that will resemble socialism.

His semi-Reaganism has been called "supply-side socialism," but that is an oxymoron. The crux of supply-side economics is tax cutting to lighten the weight of the state on entrepreneurship, and the essence of socialism is the use of the state as the central directing source of entrepreneurial energy. Mitterrand lamely says that socialism just means a "mixed economy." If so, France has had socialism since 1945. Mitterrand's predecessor, Giscard d'Estaing, warned that when the combination of taxes and social security contributions exceeds 40 percent, "we're in socialism." If so, socialism arrived under Giscard, when the combination neared 43 percent.

France has more politics than probably is good for it. With 468,000 municipal councillors, 2 percent of the electorate is in elective office. But what unquestionably is good about French politics today is that the political label with cachet is "liberalism." Here liberalism retains its traditional connotations, which are unlike those of American liberalism. Here it means an anti-statist emphasis on personal initiative and market mechanisms.

FRANCOIS MITTERRAND
Mortal blow to socialism

Mitterrand's personal initiative has been a hyperactive foreign policy, searching for what some European politicians, envious of Mrs. Thatcher, call a "Falklands effect." But the principal effect of foreign events during the last decade has been to speed the collapse of confidence among French intellectuals on the left, who have abominable records of communist affiliation or fellow traveling.

Only intellectuals inordinately fond of abstractions (like the three great incompatibles, "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity") would take until 1975 to learn (from a book, of course: Solzhenitsyn's, which had its strongest impact here) about the concrete reality of the Gulag. Also instructive were Vietnam boat people, Cambodian genocide, Afghanistan atrocities and the suppression of Poland, a nation about which France has long been sentimental. Today French intellectuals, writing with the vigor of people making up for lost time, are robustly anti-communist on their flight toward the right.

One fine day in 1953, the front page of the communist newspaper L'Humanite had a black border and this headline: "Dreadful News: Stalin is Dead." One fine day a headline may say: "Socialism, too."

Anti-embargo protests result in 300 new arrests

By The Associated Press

Protests against the Reagan administration's embargo on trade with the government of Nicaragua led to 300 new arrests Wednesday in San Francisco, a day after more than 900 demonstrators were arrested in five states.

Activists ended a 15-day sleep-in at Wisconsin's state capitol rotunda in Madison, where anti-apartheid demonstrators have been protesting the state's investment in companies that do business with South Africa.

The activists gathered up guitars, sleeping bags and banners after Gov. Anthony Earl asked them to end the sleep-in. About 250 people rallied outside the statehouse, and about 150 protesters walked across the street to the First Wisconsin National Bank, which has investments in firms doing business with South Africa.

They blocked three entrances and an underground garage driveway for about half an hour until police moved in. Police Capt. Jeffrey Frye said several demonstrators were taken into custody. Frye said he had no exact figure, but said they could be charged with disorderly conduct.

In Washington, D.C., police arrested five protesters against South Africa's apartheid racial policies who had spent two nights in a currency exchange, including the city's representative to Congress and a member of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

In Berkeley, Calif., where students have been protesting the University of California's $2.4 million investment in companies doing business with South Africa, 32 people were arrested outside the school's administration building, including writers Alice Walker, Maya Angelou, Jessica Mitford and Lawrence Ferlinghetti.

In Seattle, on the other hand, 14 people spent a quiet night in the lobby of a federal building to protest the trade embargo, then ended their demonstration peacefully Wednesday morning without being arrested.

"Our position is that as long as they are quiet and nonviolent and don't disturb anyone, we'd allow them to stay to make their point," said Ross Buffington, spokesman for the General Services Administration in Auburn, Wash.

Police said 300 people were arrested Wednesday in San Francisco as demonstrators blocked entries to the federal building.

Reagan declared the embargo May 1 to pressure the leftist government into severing its military ties with Cuba and the Soviet Union.

Agent Orange suits dismissed by judge

NEW YORK (AP) — Citing their failure to link exposure to Agent Orange with various diseases, a federal judge Wednesday dismissed the suits of 281 Vietnam veterans who opted out of a class action lawsuit against seven manufacturers of the defoliant.

"The most serious deficiency in (the veterans') case is their failure to present credible evidence of a causal link between exposure to Agent Orange and the various diseases from which they are allegedly suffering," U.S. District Judge Jack B. Weinstein wrote in a decision issued Wednesday.

On Jan. 7 Weinstein gave his final approval to the settlement of a class action lawsuit by thousands of Vietnam veterans and their families against the makers of the herbicide Agent Orange, sprayed on Southeast Asia jungles during the Vietnam war.

The seven chemical companies agreed to set up a $180 million fund for veterans and their families but denied Agent Orange had caused them injury or illness.

The settlement was announced on May 7, 1984, the day the lawsuit against the seven chemical companies was to go to trial in Weinstein's courtroom.

Vietnam vets claimed Agent Orange was responsible for a host of ills they and their families suffered, including cancer, miscarriages and birth defects.

Berg killing suspect offers innocent plea

SEATTLE (AP) — A man accused of participating in the 1984 slaying of a Denver radio personality pleaded innocent Wednesday to racketeering involving the activities of the neo-Nazi group The Order.

U.S. Magistrate Philip Sweigert denied bail for David Eden Lane, a 46-year-old former Denver resident whose trial is to begin June 17.

Lane is one of 23 people charged April 15 in a federal indictment here alleging they engaged in racketeering activities as members of The Order.

Among the allegations in the indictment were robberies of banks and armored cars and the slayings of Alan Berg, in Denver and a reputed renegade member of the group.

Controversial panelist quits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Marianne Mele Hall, chairwoman of a government panel who has come under fire for her work on a book that says blacks "insist on preserving their jungle freedoms," submitted her resignation Wednesday, the White House said.

"She thought that the best thing to do would be to resign," said Dale Petroskey, an assistant White House press secretary.

Petroskey said the resignation was effective immediately.

More than 100 members of Congress had demanded Ms. Hall's resignation from the $70,000-a-year post as chairwoman of the Copyright Royalty Tribunal in the wake of disclosures that she was involved with a 1982 book, "Foundations of Sand," which also said blacks have an "abhorrence of the work ethic."

Power rates to be cut

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission has imposed a temporary cut of about 35 percent in the rate Idaho Power Co. is required to pay for privately produced electricity.

But commissioners on Tuesday refused a request from Idaho Power to temporarily stop offering standard 35-year power-purchase contracts with so-called "cogenerators."

The commission's interim order reduced the price Idaho Power pays for cogenerated power from an average of nearly 6.8 cents per kilowatt-hour to about 4.4 cents per kilowatt-hour.

The temporarily reduced rate was announced Wednesday after the PUC heard testimony Monday and Tuesday on the utility's request to permanently slash the rate to 1.4 cents per kilowatt-hour.

Idaho Power spokesmen argued during this week's first phase of hearings on the request that the utility has enough generating plants to supply forecast demand through at least the mid-1990s, and should pay no more for private power than the cost to fuel its coal-powered plant.

Commissioner Richard High said the temporary rate would apply to contracts signed between now the time a final order is issued in the case. Once signed, those contracts may not be adjusted after a final rate is set, he said.

The commission staff is expected to release its recommendation for a permanent decision later this month, followed by a second round of hearings in late June.

Cogenerators and the PUC staff have objected to a temporary drop in rates, saying it would mean instability for power developers trying to sign contracts with Idaho Power.

In past cases, the commission has defended small power contracts, saying they will be cheaper for customers than construction of new plants.

But in Wednesday's order, the PUC conceded there was a "substantial likelihood" that current rates for cogenerators, set in 1983, underestimated the magnitude of the Northwest's power surplus.

The 1978 National Energy Act requires Idaho Power and other utilities to buy energy from cogenerators and small producers. Previous PUC-set rates for that power called for payment of 6.8 cents per kilowatt-hour delivered.

Idaho Power contends those fixed-term, fixed-rate contracts eventually will mean higher rates passed along to consumers.

Stallings hits statements by FmHA official

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, says he doesn't agree with a federal official that Idaho farm problems may have been overstated.

Last week, William Norberg, Idaho director of the Farmers Home Administration, said although some state farmers are having financial difficulty, the problems may have been exaggerated.

Stallings said earnings reports from three of Idaho's largest banking chains are down, and all of the banks say it's because of "non-performing agriculture loans."

Smaller banking chains are making similar reports, he said.

"A FmHA report shows Idaho has 7,595 farm borrowers, and 5,063 are delinquent, Stallings said, for a delinquency rate of 67 percent.

Nationwide, the delinquency rate is 62 percent, he said.

"In light of the 67 percent figure I hardly think continued concern and discussion about Idaho's farm credit problems are an overstatement," Stallings said.

He said he's asked Norberg for a report on all FmHA foreclosures and pending foreclosures.

UP&L customers to receive rate cut

SHELLEY (AP) — Customers of Utah Power & Light Co. can expect lower rate increases for the next few years from a "compassionate" UP&L, company President James Taylor said.

"You won't see the 12, 14 and 16 percent rate increases you've seen before," James Taylor said Tuesday. "The increases will be in line with inflation."

Taylor attributed lower rate increases to lower interest rates, a drop in inflation, and the lack of any major power plant construction. Large new power plants aren't needed because demand for energy is growing only 2 to 3 percent per year, rather than the 7 to 9 percent of several years ago.

Taylor said the company suffered several hard blows last year.

ISU may cut some funding

POCATELLO (AP) — The bulk of any budget cuts Idaho State University makes must come from funds appropriated for equipment and library support, ISU interim President Clifford Trump said Wednesday.

The cuts will not involve faculty, Trump said a speech to the Greater Pocatello Chamber of Commerce. He said he couldn't be more specific because funding is not yet formulated.

"We have an obligation to continue our academic programs," he said. "We have a contractual obligation with the students to fulfill their expectations."

ISU must reduce its budget by about $258,000 by July 1 because it wasn't appropriated enough money at a State Board of Education meeting in April to maintain current operations. Trump said he would view taking money from equipment and library support as "borrowing . . . but that doesn't mean that we won't eventually have a problem. It will obviously catch up with us sooner or later."

The impact of such cuts is softened because ISU put a portion of the $406,000 it received from the Idaho Legislature's "surplus eliminator bill" for equipment and library support, he said.

There are few other places the money can be found, he said, because ISU has been in financial straits for the past four or five years.

"We are running out of areas that we can consider in any way superfluous to our operation," Trump said.

Other administrators are still investigating where the cuts can be made. An absolute decision deadline will be June 17, or 10 days prior to the state board's June meeting, when ISU will seek to have its cuts approved.

'Will of voters' recalls mayor of Spirit Lake

SPIRIT LAKE (AP) — Voters have recalled Spirit Lake Mayor Jim Wilson, who six months ago gave his support to the City Council to disband the town's police department.

Recall leader Rex Morehouse, president of the Kootenai County Property Owners Association, called the Tuesday recall "the will of the people."

Wilson was recalled in a 164-123 vote.

The recall effort began six months ago when the mayor gave his support to the City Council to disband the police department because of budget problems.

Residents balked at the council's decision, and signed petitions in February protesting a move to contract with the Kootenai County Sheriff's Department for police protection.

Wilson signed the sheriff's department contract one night before protesters presented their petitions favoring a town police force to the council.

Wilson maintained that he and the sheriff's department had been negotiating a contract for weeks, and each signed the contract as soon as an agreement was reached.

Council joins foes of leasing

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — Three members of the Jackson Town Council have joined a growing list of groups opposing the reissuance of 31 oil and gas leases in the scenic Mt. Leidy area of the Bridger-Teton National Forest in northwest Wyoming.

The Town Council voted 3-2 this week in favor of a resolution submitted by the Jackson Hole Alliance for Responsible Planning, saying reissuing the leases would threaten Jackson Hole's economy and "way of life."

Alliance Chairman Karl Wagner asked the council to "associate itself with other groups" which are publicly opposing the leases. Those other groups include Wyoming's congressional delegation, the Jackson Chamber of Commerce, the Teton County Commissioners, the Outfitters and Guides Association and the Wyoming Wildlife Federation, he said.

The Mt. Leidy area is situated between the Teton Wilderness, the Gros Ventre Wilderness and Grand Teton National Park and is a prime elk migratory route and has some critical grizzly bear habitat.

Those groups fear the leasing would adversely affect the area's wildlife, citing evidence that elk, moose and deer populations are already declining in the area.

However, Mayor Bob Shervin refused to support the resolution, claiming the damage to wildlife has been done by "hippies and deadbeats" rather than by the oil and timber developers.

"I may be speaking with my tongue on my shoe or my foot in my mouth," Shervin said, "but our local game has been lost to the modern day mountain men who don't even come into town to take a bath."

Shervin also said he thinks Teton County "owes something" to the state if it wants to take advantage of oil and gas royalties generated in other counties.

Councilman Jim Critchfield also voted against the resolution. He said he agrees some areas in the Mt. Leidy Highlands shouldn't be explored or developed but the resolution should be "site specific."

NO BITBURG BEEF

There seems to be a lot of beef about Bitburg the last couple of weeks. The Bitburg Beef is kind of hard to sink your teeth into. Some people say it leaves a bad taste in your mouth, some people don't know, some people don't care. However, Swensen's are sure that, President Reagan, after all the verbal abuse dished out by self-righteous pontificators and those qualified and endowed to speak and judge for all the rest of us, wishes he had gone to Swensen's for truly tender choice beef, instead of such bad beef in Bitburg.

P.S. If you don't know already, Swensen's U.S.D.A. Choice Beef is the finest anywhere including Bitburg, Omaha, and especially those other stores. Enjoy Beef & Save at Swensen's.

Abduction of biathlete was father's scheme, son testifies

By BOB ANEZ
The Associated Press

KARI SWENSON
Wounded by accidental shot

VIRGINIA CITY, Mont. — A 20-year-old "mountain man" accused of kidnapping and wounding a world-class biathlete testified Wednesday that his father had planned for years to abduct a woman who would live with them in the wilderness.

However, Dan Nichols said he was scared from the moment he and his father, Don Nichols, grabbed Kari Swenson of Bozeman as she jogged along a mountain trail in southwestern Montana. But he said he was afraid to tell his father or release her.

"It wouldn't have done any good," he said. "It wouldn't have made any difference. He's always taught me that sometimes you just have to accept being afraid."

Testifying in the third day of his trial, the younger Nichols said he once wanted to attend art school but that his father brainwashed him into rejecting society for a life in the wilderness and sometimes beat him for disagreeing.

Speaking softly and constantly wringing his hands, he said he was constantly torn between a lonely life in the mountains with his father and an unhappy life in town with his mother and stepfather.

The Nicholses are each charged with kidnapping Miss Swenson, 23, a member of the U.S. biathlon team, near Big Sky last July 15. They also are accused of fatally shooting Alan Goldstein of Big Sky, who tried to rescue her the next day.

Dan Nichols also is charged with wounding Miss Swenson, 23, who was held for 18 hours, and could be sentenced to up to 140 years in prison if convicted. His father will stand trial later. They were captured last December.

Dan said his father frequently took him to the mountains for months at a time, making him miss school. His mother was seldom informed and after one two-month trip Don Nichols was jailed for child kidnapping, he said.

"My dad didn't believe in the system — society — civilization. He didn't believe in school and all that," Dan said.

"It was kind of like being in two different worlds. Confusing, too. I felt like an outsider in both worlds. I was given one set of rules by Lloyd (his stepfather) and another set by my dad. I didn't know which ones to follow.

"Dad was my hero. I loved him a lot. He was my favorite person."

But he said his father was strict. On any subject, "he just told me and I just thought that's the way it was," Dan testified.

He said that if he argued or failed to obey, his father "grabbed me and hit me in the head with his fist — in the forehead or side. He hit me anywhere but the face."

When he was 18, his father asked him to join him in the mountains permanently. Dan said he balked, saying he wanted to finish high school and attend art school.

After a summer of washing dishes in Jackson, Wyo., Dan said he concluded in August 1983 that he would not be able to hold a steady job and changed his mind about a mountain life.

From their first trips to the mountains near Ennis, Don Nichols talked of someday kidnapping a woman to "get a family in the mountains," Dan said.

His mother's refusal to adopt that lifestyle was the reason for his parents' divorce; he said.

Don Nichols "planned to take a girl and keep her up there long enough to see if she liked it," he added, remembering his father had told him seven years ago of a chain he had for that purpose.

Dan said he constantly tried to assure Miss Swenson she would not be hurt and would be freed if she did not like mountain life. He also denied her claim that he refused her pleas for freedom and laughed at her attempts to leave a trail.

He also said he was surprised when his father first grabbed Miss Swenson.

Briefly

Tanker flips, spills gasoline

POCATELLO (AP) — Emergency crews averted any explosion or fire early Wednesday after a fuel tanker flipped and spilled between 500 and 1,000 gallons of gasoline at a truck stop two miles south of downtown Pocatello.

The fuel, contained with dirt and foam, was finally cleaned up about mid-morning. No injuries were reported.

According to police, the spill occurred when the truck broke loose from its parking place at the Forde Johnson Truck Stop, backed up and flipped the tank trailer. Police said the driver had apparently failed to set the parking brake.

It took crews several hours to build a dike around the spilled fuel to prevent it from flowing into the city sewer system. But authorities did not evacuate a nearby restaurant or apartment complex.

LCSC prank makes wet mess

LEWISTON (AP) — Officials are still drying out from a weekend prank that turned the basement of the Lewis-Clark State College administration building into an Olympic-sized swimming pool.

"Some kids put a hose in the basement of the building and God only knows how long it ran there," said Lee Vickers, Lewis-Clark president. "It had to be an intentional act of vandalism."

Nearly a foot of water remained in the basement early this week. Vickers said staff and janitors pushed the water to drains in the building and then tried to vacuum what water remained.

Blackfoot bond meets defeat

BLACKFOOT (AP) — For the second year in a row, school district patrons at Blackfoot have rejected a proposed bond issue to pay for new education construction.

The vote Tuesday night on a proposed $4.2 million issue was 1,989 yes and 1,274 against, 187 votes short of the required two-thirds majority.

A year earlier, the school district proposed a $4.7 million bond issue, but it failed by 16 votes.

District officials wanted to use the money to build a new 21-classroom elementary school on Airport Road and renovate five other buildings.

Included was a new library at Blackfoot High School.

School district officials also promised to spend $65,000 to purchase land for a future school in the Rose area.

UI to honor four top alumni

BOISE (AP) — When Gerald Gneckow started his naval ROTC program at University of Idaho in 1956, he had never seen an ocean.

On Friday, Gneckow, now a commodore in the U.S. Navy, will be honored along with three other alumni at the University of Idaho's commencement exercises.

Gneckow, a Boise native and graduate of Boise High School, commands the USS Iowa, a World War II-vintage battleship that was taken out of mothballs and refurbished three years ago.

After graduating from UI with a bachelor of science degree in education, Gneckow said he intended to finish his three years in the Navy and become a teacher. But he stayed in.

His three sons, ranging in age from 22 to 25, had no desire to pursue Navy careers. But his 16-year-old daughter might attend the Naval Academy.

Testimony from doctor upheld by high court

BOISE (AP) — A sharply divided Idaho Supreme Court has overturned a lower court decision in ruling that a medical specialist from Oregon was qualified to be an expert witness at a Boise trial.

The court voted 3-2 on Wednesday to reverse an order issued by 4th District Judge Gerald Schroeder disallowing testimony from Dr. Anton Broms, an obstetrician-gynecologist from Portland.

Broms, a nationally board-certified medical specialist, testified for Mavis Buck in a lawsuit charging negligence on the part of Dr. Duane St. Clair of Boise.

In finding for St. Clair, Schroeder ruled Broms' testimony inadmissable on the basis that he did not meet the requirement of Idaho law that expert witnesses possess "actual knowledge of the applicable said community standard" for practice of that profession.

But the high court majority disagreed, ruling instead that specialists in obstetrics and gynecology undergo nationally designed and certified education programs, and that "the local standard of care is equivalent to the national standard of care."

In dissent from the majority, Chief Justice Charles Donaldson wrote on behalf of himself and Justice Allan Shepard that there could well be a substantive difference in medical standards and practices between, for instance, urban and rural areas.

Gorbachev hits U.S. in VE Day speech

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — In a Victory Day speech Wednesday that evoked the memory of Josef Stalin, Kremlin leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev accused the United States of policies that are bringing the world to the brink of a nuclear war.

Speaking from a stage adorned by the Soviet flag that was raised over Berlin's Reichstag in 1945, Gorbachev said the outcome of World War II was "decided on the Soviet-German front" and credited the Soviet Union with preserving peace for 40 years.

He briefly acknowledged the valor of British, French and American soldiers and called for better relations with Washington. But he he said "U.S. imperialism" has replaced Nazi aggression and that the White House is thwarting arms control efforts.

Gorbachev's speech — delivered at a Kremlin celebration with pomp and military ceremony — made points similar to those of President Reagan in a speech to the European Parliament on Wednesday.

Reagan accused the Soviets of trying to "spread their dominance by force" and developing a new land-based missile. Gorbachev charged the United States with "state terrorism" against Nicaragua and Afghanistan, trying to undermine the strategic balance and extending the arms race to outer space.

"American imperialism is at the forward edge of the war menace to mankind," Gorbachev said. "The policy of the U.S.A. is growing more bellicose ... and has become a constant negative factor in international relations."

He called for vigilance against "those who are pushing the world toward a precipice, this time a nuclear one."

GEORGI LIVANOV—Russian vet observes VE Day

Despite the sharp words in their speeches, Reagan and Gorbachev exchanged cordial telegrams to commemorate V-E Day, hailing the wartime cooperation as an example of how the United States and Soviet Union can cooperate in pursuit of a common goal.

Gorbachev spoke in the Kremlin Palace of Congresses, filled with about 6,000 Soviet veterans, active-duty soldiers, Moscow-based diplomats and delegations from the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact, other Communist nations and Communist parties.

At one point he listed World War II figures, referring to Stalin as party chief of that era. It was a passing reference that evoked a tremendous response in the hall burst into loud applause for a minute and then subsided into murmurs.

The reaction reflected the intense emotion Soviets feel when discussing the war and wartime leaders like Stalin, whose memory survives official efforts to erase it.

Soldiers turned the wood-paneled hall into a sea of brown, green and blue. As they stood for the national anthem, the soft tinkling of their medals rippled through the auditorium.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur A. Hartman was absent, and also planned to stay away from today's Red Square parade because of the shooting of a U.S. officer by a Soviet sentry in East Germany. Ambassadors from Britain, France and Italy were in the audience.

After the national anthem, high-ranking officers carried in the Reichstag flag and the war standards of the Soviet army, navy and air force, followed by an honor guard that changed every 15 minutes throughout the two-hour meeting.

Gorbachev and other Soviet leaders were arrayed in front of a 20-foot-high bust of Lenin. At intervals, hundreds of soldiers and uniformed children filled the aisles to sing patriotic songs and wave banners and paper flowers.

Gorbachev donned reading glasses and, sniffling occasionally from a cold, delivered a 65-minute speech that began with a patriotic review of the war.

Gorbachev made several references to "our victory in the great patriotic war" and dismissed early Western aid as "a symbol."

Laced with the patriotism were accusations that the "capitalist nations" encouraged Hitler.

"Today we know more and better ... who helped the fascist ruling clique," he said, calling Western policy "the ultimate in political irresponsibility."

Migrants, locals clash east of Johannesburg

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Migrant workers and residents of a black township battled with hatchets, knives and stones on a 24-hour rampage that left 11 blacks dead, authorities said Wednesday.

Police fired rubber bullets and tear gas to restore order, and roadblocks sealed off the township.

The fighting in Tsakane township east of Johannesburg pitted migrant men, enraged by the burning of their beer hall, against permanent residents of the township, witnesses said. The township was described as quiet late Wednesday after the estimated 1,800 migrant workers were escorted out of the township by a dozen armored vehicles.

Streets were littered with glass from windows smashed in hundreds of homes during the fighting that started Tuesday night and ended Wednesday.

Elsewhere, police reported rioting in several black townships, mainly in the eastern Cape province, and controversy raged over the death of a prominent trade union activist of head injuries soon after his release from police detention.

Police described the Tsakane battle as a fight among tribal factions, saying most of those killed were from the Xhosa tribe based in the south of the country.

But residents said the fighting broke out over the migrants' anger at local youths who burned their beer hall to protest white rule. Beer halls, which provide revenue for the white government's local black councils, have been frequent targets of rioters attacks in recent months.

L.M. Boyd What's what

Try this on your family's history expert: The most famous speech ever made in America was delivered by a man with small pox? Who was he? Claim is Abe Lincoln had a mild case of that disease when he gave his Gettysburg Address.

It was none other than the American journalist Ambrose Bierce who said, "Woman would be more charming if one could fall into her arms without falling into her hands."

Three out of four murderers have less than average intelligence. University studies suggest murder usually occurs because the murderer doesn't have enough imagination to solve the problem any other way.

EYESIGHT

Q. How many Americans lose their eyesight on any given day?

A. 126. But at least 2,000 regain some vision with surgery during that time.

The man, typically, is likely to wait until the gas tank is nearly empty, but the woman, typically, is inclined to fill it up at about half.

Q. Is there any sort of bird that can fly the moment it's hatched from the shell?

A. Only one, insofar as I know — Australia's mound builder bird.

The moon is exactly 232,271 miles, 2,014 feet, 10 inches away from the earth.

PRIVATE EYE

Allan Pinkerton, founder of the original private-eye agency, was himself a fugitive from justice. Nothing sinister. He'd escaped from Scottish police who wanted him in connection with political riots.

These three basic rules of effective communication were enunciated first by the late Vice President Alben Barkley: 1. Have something to say. 2. Say it. 3. Shut up.

All over Burma are signs, both in English and Burmese, imploring the traveler: "Be kind to the animals — don't eat them."

It was the Arab sailors from the wrecked Spanish armada who taught the Scots how to weave wool tweeds.

Nine out of 10 readers of science fiction are male.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning brings out all sorts of problems with saying or doing the tactful thing, and it is not a good time to make commitments. You have an opportunity to make long-term plans.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Find a better way of handling career duties and later you can handle business matters very wisely.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You get some good ideas for becoming more successful provided you steer clear of a newcomer.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Go to an expert for advice about business problems, and then you can handle them wisely.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You and a partner may be at odds in the morning, but later can reach a fine accord.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Work may go slowly in the morning, but don't get discouraged since later all picks up and you can accomplish a great deal.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You find it difficult to reach one you like and make plans, but later something comes up and you can have a fine time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You may not comprehend what is going on at home, but bide your time and then you can profit from the situation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try not to fly off the handle with a bigwig or you lose valuable support. Be very careful in the handling of mechanical gadgets.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You do not understand a monetary matter well in the morning, so give it more thought before you handle it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You may feel very anxious without cause in the morning, so go after your personal wishes with poise and gain them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't worry about a situation you can do little about. Concentrate on more practical affairs.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) Earnestly plan how to gain your personal wishes and then carry through in a most positive way and get right results.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY...he or she will early have to be shown that it is foolish to act on impulse and be taught to think and make plans before taking action on anything. Your progeny can become a fine organizer. Teach to be more direct and not try to work so many angles.

Academy-award winner still working as refugee counselor

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Despite an Academy Award for "The Killing Fields," Dr. Haing S. Ngor continues to work for $400 a week counseling refugees at the Chinatown Service Center.

Ngor, 36, has no beach house in Malibu or mansion in Bel-Air. The physician, who speaks nine languages, maintains a modest apartment on the edge of Chinatown, near his work at the center, which provides social services, job training and placement for about 30,000 Chinese and Indochinese each year.

On a shelf beside his French-English dictionary, there is a paperback copy of "The Killing Fields" — the factually based story of an American reporter and his Cambodian assistant during the fall of Cambodia in 1975.

In "The Killing Fields," Ngor portrayed Dith Pran, the assistant who was forced into slave-labor in the fields with millions of other Cambodians.

Ngor's experiences under the Khmer Rouge were similar to Pran's. Both escaped into Thailand. All that remains of Ngor's family is a younger brother, who lives in Van Nuys, and two nieces.

Ngor said he got the film role "by accident."

"I tell you, the movie business in Cambodia is very low-class people," he said. "Doctors are like pretty high."

But the casting director was at a wedding Ngor attended and after several interviews and an offer of $1,300 a week, Ngor agreed.

Still, he said, he only learned the extent of his part when he arrived in Thailand with the filmmakers in 1983.

"They said, 'Haing, you play this part,' and I said, 'Oh, my God.'"

Williams moves near Russian River

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Robin Williams, star of the film "Moscow on the Hudson," is moving to Sonoma near -- of all places -- the Russian River.

Williams, 32, and his wife, Valerie, sold their Topanga Canyon home to live year-round on their 600-acre ranch in the Sonoma wine country, said Gary Harryman, who handled the deal through Malibu Realty.

"They sold their Topanga digs for $270,000" to writer Gene Larson and his wife, Jodi Johnson, he said.

"Robin and Valerie built a large plantation house on the ranch, which they've owned for some time, and they have every comfort there that a Caesar ever had," Harryman said.

Because of his acting career, the couple, who have a 2-year-old son, Zachary, will also maintain a Los Angeles apartment. But his business card describes him only as "Robin Williams, Rancher."

Mother Teresa talks with Bangladesh head

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Nobel laureate Mother Teresa talked with President Lt. Gen. Hossain Mohammad Ershad on Wednesday about welfare and humanitarian programs for children, a presidential official said.

In their meeting at the president's house, they also discussed establishing a rehabilitation center for lepers in Bangladesh, said the official.

The 75-year-old Mother Teresa, here on a 24-hour visit, lectured at two conferences and visited a children's home.

"We must love our fellow people who live and die in poverty and hunger," she told a seminar on adult education. "It is not important how much we give but it is important much love we put in our giving."

She was to leave for Calcutta, India, later Wednesday.

Austin councilman in bed with fever

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — City Councilman Mark Spaeth, who is seeking a divorce from actress Amanda Blake, has been hospitalized for treatment of a mysterious fever, officials said.

"His illness is being kept between the two of them," said Kathy Glynn, Ms. Blake's manager in Hollywood. "They agreed not to discuss that or their divorce."

Spaeth, a 45-year-old real estate investor, was admitted Monday to Brackenridge Hospital.

"Mr. Spaeth is in guarded condition. He was admitted for diagnostic tests for a fever of unknown origin," hospital spokesman Donald Winspear said Tuesday.

Two weeks ago, he filed for divorce from Ms. Blake, whom he married in April 1984.

While hospitalized in Houston last June, Spaeth fell and broke his arm after becoming dizzy. He returned there in December citing weakness and weight loss. In announcing in February that he would not seek a second term, Spaeth said tests indicated he had a viral infection that would require further treatment.

Koch pays fifth visit to Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — New York City's flamboyant Mayor Edward Koch arrived Wednesday for his fifth trip to Israel.

Koch, who was to attend a ceremony Wednesday night in Tel Aviv marking the 40th anniversary of the end of World War II, was met here by Foreign Ministry officials.

During his five-day visit, Koch is to meet Israeli immigrants from New York City, attend a book fair in Jerusalem and meet Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek.

He last visited Israel in February 1983.

A tourist from New York City, Ellie Torres, said she sat next to Koch on the flight to Israel. She said he forgot his reading glasses and borrowed hers, which he promised to return before leaving Israel.

Jackson to deliver radio commentaries

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson will deliver social commentaries on 150 radio stations beginning in mid-May, the president of a radio syndication company said.

The former Democratic presidential candidate was asked to make the commentaries for morning and evening drive time broadcasts because he was recently named the third most admired man in America after President Reagan and the pope, according to a recent Gallup poll, said Bob Dockery Jr., president of Syndicate 1.

"I look forward to this daily dialogue with America as a way of lifting the sights of the common people," said Jackson.

"There is no question that Rev. Jackson has become a spokesman for a diverse segment of the American public and, therefore, is a perfect choice to discuss topical issues," Dockery said. "In addition, he is an incredible speaker."

Sailor's body goes to girlfriend instead of wife

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — The body of a married sailor was sent to his girlfriend instead of his wife, who didn't know about the other woman, according to a suit filed by the seaman's widow.

The $450,000 suit was filed Tuesday against the San Mateo County coroner's office by Maria Rivera, whose husband, Antonio, 50, died of a heart attack at San Francisco International Alport in July. The suit was also brought on behalf of their two children, Lawrence, 17, and Lynette, 12.

The suit seeks compensatory damages for mental anguish they claimed to have suffered over the mixup. It also said Rivera, a merchant seaman from Chula Vista, was buried in a cemetery instead of at sea as he requested.

San Mateo County Coroner Paul Jensen declined comment Wednesday on the suit.

The coroner's office was contacted by the girlfriend, Elizabeth Rivera, and wrote her name on the death certificate, the suit claimed.

Rivera's body, wedding ring, passport and credit cards all went to the girlfriend in Los Angeles, the suit alleged.

The plaintiffs said they have been unable to collect union benefits, aid for the children or Social Security because the death certificate lists another person. The family also has yet to receive Rivera's personal effects and his car.

Appraiser has beholder's eye on tax dollar

Editor's note: Beginning May 17, county property owners will begin receiving their tax assessment notices for 1985. These articles examine how property is assessed in Twin Falls County.

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Worth, like beauty, is in the eyes of the beholder.

County appraisers are beholders who value property for taxing purposes. While they have regulations to follow, their judgment and experience is part of the process.

Appraising is simple on one level when it comes to measuring buildings and counting the number of tool sheds and potato cellers. But it becomes more complex in the depreciation, factoring and figuring.

By law, the appraiser assess homes, farms, commercial buildings and personal property at 100 percent of market value. In addition, however, the assessor must treat similar properties in the same way.

According to a state law, every property in a county must be reappraised once every five years, or 20 percent a year. The 20 percent must include commerical, residential and farm properties in various parts of the county.

Houses in Twin Falls can't be given the same value as similar houses in Buhl, says Twin Falls County chief appraiser Gerry Bowden.

On each type of property, appraisers measure, photograph, and inspect the buildings. But the toughest part is back at the office in the different formulas, guidelines, manuals, experience and judgment to determine values for thousands of properties.

Appraisers take three approaches to arrive at a value. Simplified they are: the cost of property, the market value based on sales information and the properties ability to produce income.

Because of the types of information available, the appraiser may rely more heavily on one or a combination. Or as one appraisers said, the one with which he feels comfortable.

What follows is a simplified explanation of how properties are valued.

RESIDENTIAL

Using a guide from the State Tax Commission, appraisers place residential property in eight different categories, from simple home to townhouse. The guide sets a value per square foot for each category. The criteria for the categories depend on, among other things, fixtures, quality of construction and complexity. The appraiser uses his judgment to determine the best category for the property.

Using the market approach, appraisers gather information about sales. Since markets vary within the county, information must be gathered from all areas. Similar houses in Twin Falls and Buhl would not have the same value because of different markets. Even within Twin Falls, there are different values for similar houses, Bowden said. ## Complaints, questions about size of assessments expected

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — During the next few weeks, Twin Falls County property owners should begin receiving 1985 tax assessments. That will be the time for owners to ask questions if there is a disagreement with the assessment or valuation of property, says Twin Falls County Assessor Dorothy Hamby.

Complaints or questions first should be directed to the assessor's office. Hamby's staff will review the appraisal with the property owner and explain how the assessment figure was reached.

If the problem can't be resolved, then a county property owner may ask for a hearing with the Board of Equalization, which is the Twin Falls County Board of Commissioners.

The property owner must file an appeal with the board on or before June 24. State law dictates that the Board of Equalization meets only in June. If there are many requests for hearings, the board can extend its meeting time into the first part of July, Hamby says.

Anyone who did not file an appeal by the June deadline can't appeal their tax assessments when tax bills are mailed in the fall.

At the hearing of the Board of Equalization, a property owner may bring supporting evidence. Hamby also will bring her information.

The board will then determine if an individual's tax assessment should be adjusted.

Property owners can appeal any decision of the Board of Equalization to the State Tax Commission and ultimately to district court, Hamby says.

In Twin Falls County, the Board of Equalization met on only one case last year, Hamby says. In that case, the State Tax Commission upheld the county's assessment.

The assessor's office doesn't receive as many questions in the spring as it does when the tax bills are distributed in the fall.

Receiving a tax assessment this month may not mean a whole lot, Hamby says.

"There's more of an impact when it's in dollars and cents" when the tax bill arrives, Hamby adds. "By do anything about evaluation."

Hamby also says she hears complaints about high taxes. The assessor's office is responsible only for the valuation of property, she adds. The tax levies, which are based on how much schools, county governments, highway districts and other agencies need to operate, are not set by the assessor's office.

Cogeneration plant taxation subject of Pugmire's manual

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

GOODING — Shortly after his appointment in 1983, Gooding County Assessor Doyle Pugmire announced that fish-raising facilities were not on the tax rolls.

Asked by the State Tax Commission, Pugmire developed a manual for appraising fish farms. The manual now is used by other counties.

Pugmire, again with the aid of the state, is now preparing a similar how-to manual on another specialized property: cogeneration plants.

Scott Erwin, the district supervisor of the State Tax Commission, said the problem with fish farms and now with cogeneration plants was that no one knew how to adequately appraise them.

Since the smaller cogeneration plants are considered commercial property, they are the responsibility of the counties to assess for taxing purposes, Erwin said. The state agency only is responsible for assessing large utilities and industrial properties.

Cogeneration is "in its infancy," Pugmire said. Without adequate information, the assessors were hard pressed to value the properties at market value as required by law.

To arrive at a market value, appraisers use three approaches for appraising property: the cost of the property and improvements, market value and its ability to produce income.

Because cogeneration operations were so new there was no history of sales or income, Pugmire said. He turned to other sources to find information about costs, income and expenses to use in the appraisal process.

In his research, Pugmire has contacted every state, several appraisal societies, the Department of Energy, the Idaho Public Utility Commission, other assessors and the Idaho Power Co., which purchases power generated by the cogeneration operations.

Pugmire also said he will talk with people who operate cogeneration plants. In Gooding County, there are 10 such operations.

The manual should be completed in time to place the cogeneration property in Gooding County on the tax rolls by October.

Although the majority of property is placed on the tax rolls by June, assessors may add new additions later, Pugmire said.

"We just want to make sure they pay their share," he added.

Before the manual becomes available, the state advises assessors to value the cogeneration propery on the cost approach. That is, finding the cost of the property and then depreciating it, Erwin said.

Tax payers have much to gain from the additions of new property because the tax base is broadened.

In Gooding County, almost $8.7 million worth of fish farm ponds and raceways fattened the tax rolls in 1984.

Pugmire said he did not know how many dollars worth of cogeneration property would be added on the rolls once the manual is complete and used.

State commission takes part in process with several roles

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The State Tax Commission has several roles in the property tax process: assistant, examiner and educator.

Testing the assessment work of counties is only one of its jobs, said Alan S. Dornfest, tax policy specialist with the state Department of Revenue and Taxation, the Idaho State Tax Commission. About 98 percent of the time, the commission is training and aiding county officials.

In its role as examiner, district tax officials in Twin Falls work with county assessors each year to develop ratio studies. Required by law, the studies include sales information used by the assessors to help set values on properties.

Under state law, properties must be assessed at 100 percent of market value, or what average, typical property should sell for on the market.

To obtain the sales information, the state and county rely on voluntary information. When a property deed is recorded with the county, a questionnaire is sent to the new buyer.

Property owners, however, are not required to return the form, which asks the sales price and other information.

The counties and state use sales that have taken place between the first of June and the end of July every year, said Scott Erwin, the district supervisor of the tax commission. Erwin's district covers the Magic Valley.

The state uses the ratio studies to check the levels and uniformity of the county assessments, Erwin said.

Twin Falls schools face cutbacks if override levy vote fails

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If the $686,650 override levy requested by the Twin Falls School Board does not pass Tuesday, school superintendent Carl Snow says some academic programs or activities will have to be cut.

"If you cut programs, it takes years to build it back," he said. Snow said the board would have to decide which programs to cut, but that he would guess non-academic activities would be cut before academic ones.

He says the total sports, music and other non-academic activities budget for the district is about $95,860, less than one percent of the budget.

Snow said Tuesday the district has $41 million worth of buildings and the maintenance will help the district protect its investment. "We have fairly good schools and we need to keep them up. If we put it off, it will cost twice as much next time," Snow says.

He blames the Legislature for the number of override elections being run in school districts around the state and says that as long as the Legislature continues to limit school fund increases without allowing schools to raise more local taxes, schools will be forced to run override elections.

Snow says he does not know of a school district statewide that is not running an override election.

Of last year's $634,550 override levy, Snow says all but about $30,000 has been spent. He says $18,000 worth of ceiling tiles will be bought after the high school gets its new roof and another $10,000-$12,000 worth of maintenance materials have not yet been bought.

A brochure circulated by the district says that the cost of the proposed override will be $26.18 for property assessed at $40,000 and $62.76 for a $100,000 property. The brochure says the tax load in those brackets will increase $1.92 and $4.68 respectively.

Even if this override passes, Snow says he expects there will be another override next year, unless the Legislature appropriates more money for the schools or allows local taxes to grow faster.

Next year's override would be smaller if this year's passes, because the district will finish the last major roofing project with this year's funds, Snow said.

There are seven major areas in which the requested funds will be spent. One major portion will be spent for books and the rest will be spent for building and grounds maintenance.

[illegible] at the high school and Robert Stuart Junior High School, and four sections of the high school as well as roof repairs at Lincoln Elementary School.

Snow says last year's override was supposed to pay for the entire project at the high school, but that the roofs were in worse condition than was originally expected.

Furnace and boiler repairs at the high school and four elementary schools would take $9,000.

Another $35,000 would be spent for painting at all schools. Snow says the district did no painting in the schools last summer and has cut way back for three years.

Some $40,000 would go toward black top repairs at the high school, both junior high schools and Sawtooth Elementary School as well as repairs to the running tracks at the high school and Robert Stuart Junior High School.

Another $10,000 will be spent for concrete repairs and some new sidewalks at the high school, Stuart, and Morningside and Bickel elementary schools.

An estimated $650 would be spent for an expanded sewer line at Morningside Elementary School.

Some $200,000 would be spent for textbooks and library books. Snow said this amount would bring the district nearly up-to-date in textbook adoptions.

Snow says the district sent home brochures about the override with students on Tuesday and that he has been meeting with civic groups and appearing on local radio and television broadcasts to convince voters to support the override.

The Chamber of Commerce board of directors has voted unanimously to endorse the override, Snow said.

Trio faces drug dealing charges

TWIN FALLS -- Two Twin Falls men and another from Buhl face drug charges after being arrested Tuesday afternoon by Twin Falls police.

The three suspects are employees of the Longview Fibre Co., and according to Public Safety Director Tim Qualls, were arrested following an investigation that involved city police in cooperation with Longview Fibre officials. He said his department had been working with the manufacturing concern in the investigation over the past three weeks.

According to the criminal complaints against the ment filed with Fifth District Magistrate Court, some of the alleged drug transactions had taken place at the business.

Arrested were David Bruce Warnock, 36, of 1351 Fifth Ave. E., and Dirk Michael Howard, 27, 268 Orchard Drive, both Twin Falls, and Douglas Lee Linam, 29, of 611 11th St. N. in Buhl.

Howard was charged Wednesday with two counts of selling a controlled substance -- marijuana. According to a complaint filed with the court, the charges stemmed from a May 1 and May 6 incident where 25 grams of marijuana were sold for $275 in the South Park area.

Warnock was charged with one count of selling marijuana April 2.

Linam was charged with selling one-half of a gram of cocaine May 1, according to a complaint filed with the court.

Warnock was being held in Twin Falls County Jail in lieu of a $3,000 bond and Howard in lieu of a $10,000 bond. Linam was released on $3,000 bond.

The three will appear for a preliminary hearing May 20.

Qualls said there may be additional arrests. The three were arrested at the company Tuesday.

Burglars hit Taco Time till

TWIN FALLS — Thieves took $980 in currency and change from the Taco Time restaurant at 659 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., sometime early Wednesday morning, according to Twin Falls police reports.

An employee of the fast food restaurant discovered the burglary at 9 a.m. Wednesday when she reported for work.

Police said an attempt was made to enter through the drive-in window but when the window jammed, the main door of the building was broken open.

The loss included $780 in currency and $200 in change which had been left in the office area of the building, the report stated.

Dollar fee planned at falls

TWIN FALLS — Visitors to Shoshone Falls Park and Dierkes Lake will be required to pay $1 a carload this summer beginning Friday. The park is open from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m.

The money collected is used only for upkeep and improvements at the park and the lake.

Hearing clinics set this week

TWIN FALLS — Three hearing clinics, all free, will be held this week and next as part of Better Speech and Hearing Month, sponsored by the Magic Valley Speech and Hearing Association.

One clinic will be held Wednesday in Jerome from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the clinic office, 113 W. 5th Ave. A second will be held in Rupert on Friday, from 9 a.m. to noon at the city auditorium. The third will be on Saturday, May 25, in Twin Falls from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Lenkner, Michener & Associates, 493 Eastland Drive. For more information, call 734-8324.

If there are problems, the county can adjust individual assessments or whole sections in an area where assessments may be too high or too low.

The state attempts to work with the county on any problems, Dornfest said. The last resort is a hearing.

The relationship between county and state is a good one, Dornfest said, and Twin Falls County Assessor Dorthy Hamby agreed.

Conflicts did arise between counties and state when the new system of assessing property at market value arrived with the One Percent Initiative, Dornfest said. In 1982, counties had to reassess all property at full market value. About a half a dozen counties fought the state claim that property assessments in the counties were too low.

The next year, about a dozen disagreed, including Twin Falls County. In 1984, three counties disagreed.

"Our whole principal is to avoid this by working with the counties," Dornfest said.

Erwin added that counties and the State Tax Commission probably work closer now than ever before because they have learned the new tax system together.

Dornfest said, "We are all working toward a common goal."

Besides its role as inspector, the State Tax Commission annually prepares tables used by the counties to determine the value of personal property used in farming and commerical operations. These items range from tractors to typewriters.

The commission also prepares computer programs for counties to use in the taxing process.

It also has the job of training appraisers, who require two years of schooling, plus several hours of workshops and seminars annually.

State appraisers set values on industrial properties and utilities. These types of properties require specialized training to appraise them for tax purposes, Dornfest said. Industrial property and utilities make up about seven percent of the total properties in the state.

Appraisal

proach means finding what the residence would rent for if vacant.

In the cost approach, the value would be derived from determining what it would cost to build the home brand-new less depreciation. An appraiser uses his judgment to determine values from the different approaches plus other information would be correlated for a final value on typical residence in an area.

"It's not real cut and dried. All we can do is an average for similar homes," Bowden said. Multi-family residential properties with more than four units would be considered commerical.

AGRICULTURAL

A value on farm land mostly is based on the land's capability to produce crops or the number of livestock it can sustain, said appraiser John Knapple, an 11-year veteran with the Twin Falls County Assessor's office.

To help the county determine value, farmers in the county are surveyed each year about the types and amount of crops grown, source of water and if applicable, the type of lease he has with the land owner.

The county annually surveys businesses and uses information from the University of Idaho to determine the prices of crops, seeds, pesticides, fertilizers and other expense-related items.

From the information gathered, the assessor's office will determine what crops are predominately grown in certain soil classes in certain areas of the county, Knapple said.

Yet, there are also expenses to consider. The county calculates typical expenses for major crops grown in certain areas. From the survey, the assessor's office also determines the prevalent type of farm lease in areas of the county.

From all these factors — expense, income, rotation, leasing — a value is placed on land of a certain soil class and in different locations.

A computer calculates the assessment of agricultural property after the appraiser codes it for appropriate soil class, location and other characteristics.

The appraisers judgment comes into play in cases where the abnormal arises. If a farming operation has irregular fields -- which are more expensive to farm -- in an area surrounded by retangular ones, an adjustment will be made to the individual's assessment.

On ranching operations, similar approaches to find land value are taken. Some feedlots, however, may be tha taxed on the basis of income, similar to commerical property. Time was when assessors had to count cattle, sheep and other livestock.

The importance of farming in Idaho is reflected in the state law. While the law of the land is to assess property at full market value for taxing purposes, farmland is an exception. Because of state law, farm land is assessed at about a third of its market value.

About $6.9 billion worth of farm land is not taxed compared to the $3 billion that is placed on the tax rolls, said Alan S. Dornfest, tax policy specialist with the Idaho State Tax Commission.

While people may think it unfair, farmers have more land than other people, Dornfest said.

"Every state gives preferential treatment to farm land," he added.

Homeowners receive a similar benefit through the homeowners exemption. There are no similar benefits for the owners of commercial property.

To value buildings on farms, such as barns or sheds, Knopple uses a guide provided by the State Tax Commission. The guide places values on all types of buildings from chicken houses to milking parlors.

He then depreciates the building to a value of what it would be worth today, using his experience as an appraiser.

The assessed value of land, buildings and the residence are added together for property assessments on a farm.

COMMERICIAL

Commerical properties mostly are valued using the income approach or how much income a property owner will derive from the property, be it occupied by bank or bowling alley, said Ron Taylor, former county assessor. Taylor, a private appraiser, now is contracted by the county to appraise commerical property.

Using a guide similar to the one for residential and farm buildings, an appraiser categorizes commercial property. Each certain category carries a cost per square-foot used later in the appraisal process.

Although he uses the guide, the appraiser uses his judgment and some guidelines to determine if any additional feature, such as air conditioning, on the property would add value.

The appraiser also uses the cost approach to determine what the building would rent for if vacant. To find rent prices for different types of buildings, Taylor does research among businesses in the county.

PERSONAL

Items used in farming and business -- which may including anything from tractors, office machines, fixtures or shelving -- are taxed as personal property. Even vault doors in banks may be declared as personal property.

Annually farmers and businesses are asked to submit a declaration form. The form askes about the type of equipment and when purchased or the year it was manufactured.

Using a guide from the State Tax Commission, the assessor's office will calculate depreciation to determine the value of the equipment.

Grasshopper funds decision help up

Spraying money still focus of search

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

WASHINGTON — U.S. Sec. of Agriculture John Block Wednesday delayed any announcement about the federal government's plans for battling a growing grasshopper threat in the West.

Block told Idaho Sen. Jim McClure that federal officials still are combing the U.S. Department of Agriculture's budget for money to pay for a spraying campaign, said McClure aide H.L. Palmer.

McClure, Sen. Steve Symms, Idaho Rep. Larry Craig and Utah Rep. Jim Hansen pressed Block Tuesday to release between $14.5 million and $15 million immediately.

The U.S. Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, the federal agency which has the job of controlling insects on federal lands, has estimated it will cost that much to spray insecticide from planes over areas in the West that are likely to be infested this year. Only $1 million currently is available. Large swaths of southern Idaho are included among the threatened areas.

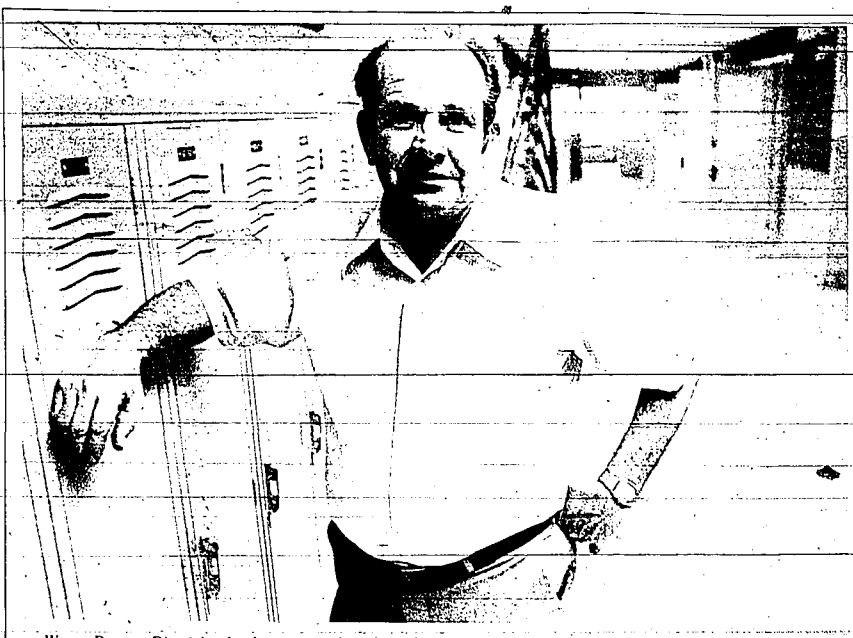
Block had promised McClure that he would make a decision on the funding on Wednesday. [illegible] time for an announcement.

When he spoke to Block Wednesday, McClure reminded him that "Time is of the essence," Palmer said.

Southern Idaho and other parts of the West were hit hard last year by grasshoppers that moved out of publicly owned range into farm fields, destroying crops.

After visiting some infested Idaho fields, Block provided more than $500,000 in emergency funds to combat the grasshoppers and pledged to get an early start if the insects reappeared this year.

Idaho officials last week organized a limited spraying campaign, which could go into action after June 1.



Wayne Perron, Dietrich school superintendent, has a budget in the black and is proud of the educational program

Dietrich not ready to join

With the district in the black, consolidation a ticklish issue

By KRISTIN TUCKER
Times-News correspondent

DIETRICH — The Dietrich school enrollment is rising, the school budget is in the black and superintendent/principal Wayne Perron says, "we just feel we are doing a good job."

In the midst of a controversy about consolidating Lincoln County's three school districts (Shoshone, Richfield, and Dietrich), Perron says he is proud of the educational program offered in Dietrich.

The 96-square-mile school district, the smallest in the county, is the only school district in Idaho that is completely surrounded by another district.

With only 160 students enrolled in Dietrich's two schools, school officials boast of the low student-teacher ratio, the 5,000-volume school library, three computers for student use and a variety of audio-visual and office equipment to aid teaching.

Since coming to the district 18 years ago, Perron says he has led the school out of financial difficulties which included a $20,000 debt. Changes in school funding have helped the small district financially by no longer basing school receipts on class size and attendance, says Perron.

"We operated at starvation levels until the change in funding," he says.

Federal funding and special grants have enabled Perron to stretch the schools' dollars farther, he says. District financial investments earn enough interest to fund some projects.

"We've added at least three classes without an additional bond issue," says Perron. "Our tax base is so low that we could have huge override percentage and not take in any money."

Says school board member Leon

Two tales of a horse: ownership dispute results in auction

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — The case of two persons who claim ownership to a registered Quarter Horse filly has brought to light a situation law enforcement officers say all livestock owners should be aware of if they buy or sell animals.

Two women who jointly purchased the filly are now contesting ownership. According to reports, one holds registration papers in her name and the other has a bill of sale in her name.

As it stands, according to law enforcement officers, neither has proof of ownership since there is no brand inspection to go with either the registration or bill of sale.

"What we will probably do," said Jerome County Deputy Sheriff Larry Webb, "is have the two owners sit down with their attorneys and come to an agreement."

According to Terry Roth of Wendell, who also once had an interest in the filly and is attempting to help establish ownership, the horse was purchased from a man in Burley. One woman paid cash while the two others, Roth and the woman who now has the bill of sale, were to pay by trading the filly's offspring or breeding services from stallions they own.

One of the owners sent in the information for registration of the animal with the American Quarter Horse Association, and breed registration was issued in her name. The other made the final payment to the former owner and received the bill of sale in her name. The woman with the bill of sale took the horse from the one with the registration papers, but officers would now accept a stolen report, according to Roth.

Webb said in checking out the situation, he learned from brand inspectors that Idaho law is somewhat unique. Until a brand inspection is made and the inspection certificate issued to go with the bill of sale or registration, legal ownership cannot be proven in Idaho.

District Brand Inspector K. C. Bartholomew of Twin Falls said a recorded brand along with the bill of sale will satisfy his department in transferring.

Webb and Roth agree there are numerous horses, mules and cattle that are purchased every year from friends or in private negotiations where no brand inspections are made and where the animals are not branded.

Webb said even if there is no brand, a brand inspection will verify that the former owner has or has not sold the animal to the current owner.

"Anyone who buys any horses or other livestock would be protecting themselves legally if they make sure they get an brand inspection," Webb said. "There might never be a problem if nobody contested the ownership or the horse or other animal was never stolen, but in the event of a dispute over ownership, the rightful owner had better have the brand inspection certificate."

Proof of ownership and a brand inspection is also required if the horse is transported over a state line.

Roth said she has 25 horses and probably could not prove to Idaho authorities that she owns any of them.

"Registration papers have always been considered proof of ownership with the AHQA (and other breeder organizations) and even the racing association," Roth said. "I sell a horse and I transfer the registration to the new owner and as far as I have always believed that is proof of ownership. Now I find that isn't acceptable in Idaho.

"I tried to get a brand inspection certificate duplication because the original was lost in a fire. The brand inspection was made in Nevada about six years ago," she added. "I find the state of Nevada destroys brand inspection records after five years. What can I do? As a horse breeder and owner I'm scared to death."

INN hopes to talk Burley power rates

By SARAH MURPHY
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — Idaho Neighbors Network of Burley is trying to set up a town meeting by next week with Burley city officials to discuss the city's new electric policy which went into effect May 1, says Burley INN Spokesman Kim Anderson.

Anderson, along with other members of the INN group had asked the council April 15 to delay action on the proposed change in the city's electrical policy, which would raise penalty rates for service termination because of non-payment of utility bills.

Anderson said the INN represented Burley residents who are poor or on fixed incomes and would be adversely affected by the city's new policy.

However, council members adopted the policy change but told Anderson the wording could be changed later if necessary.

Anderson says two issues will be presented to the city by the INN: a proposal to effect a winter moritorium on electrical service shut-offs between Nov. 15 and March 15 and a request that the city lower the charges for notification of delinquency ($20) and for shut-off ($25) in case no payment is made by the deadline set by the city.

Anderson says the policy, as it stands, will cause a hardship to older people and to low income people who may be on fixed incomes and can't afford to pay the high electric bills they accrue in the winter months.

Burley Mayor Chuck Shaddock says the city will be glad to talk with any residents who come to them with their utility problems.

"We have been trying to help," says Shaddock. "We think a level payment plan, which is available to all customers, is the way to go.

A level payment is a uniform billing each month, based on an average of the customer's yearly electrical consumption, reducing the extremely high electrical bills incurred in the winter months, says Shaddock.

Anderson says many of the people they repre-

Burley council approves utility advice contract

By SARAH MURPHY
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — The Burley City Council moved Monday to sign a six-month contract with Portland attorney Ray Foleen to advise the city during Bonneville Power Administration's negotiations with four Northwest private utility companies for a settlement on the Washington Public Power Supply System (WPSS) Plant No. 3.

If the council decides to hire Foleen, he would work on a trial basis for $300 per month.

Councilman Truman Bradley, who proposed that Foleen be hired, said Burley, which is already paying BPA $487,000 per year on the 70 percent-completed WPSS plant, will be directly involved in the outcome of BPA's settlement with the private utilities, all of which are located in Washington and Oregon.

"We are full-reliance customers of BPA," said Bradley, "and we have access to no other power source but theirs. We don't generate our own power."

Bradley said Foleen has agreed to represent non-generating utilities, such as Burley, at meetings which will outline the 22 settlement contracts being considered by BPA and the private utilities, who own 30 percent of WPSS Plant 3.

Bradley said none of the non-generating utilities

Ketchum seeks ruling on water system plans

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — The city of Ketchum is awaiting a decision by Fifth District Judge Phillip M. Becker on whether or not it can extend its municipal water system into an area served by a private water utility.

Becker heard arguments Monday on the request from Ketchum Spring Water Supply Co., Inc. for a preliminary injunction to stop the city from serving the Northwood subdivision and Bigwood area north of the city.

The city reached an agreement with the developers of Northwood to serve the area when it annexed the last year. Developers already have extended the city's lines into subdivision.

In the suit, Ketchum Spring Water president William Touw claims he has an exclusive right to serve the area under his certificate from the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

However, Ketchum argues it has the right to extend its water system if the customers within the area request it.

Touw's system also serves the downtown business district with water, and he recently challenged Ketchum's efforts to get an economic development grant from the state to extend its system to that area.

Ketchum claims the private utility is incapable of providing the downtown with the amount of water required by the Uniform Fire Code and wants to extend its system primarily for fire protection.

The city claims only other private utilities are prohibited from encroaching into Ketchum Spring Water's certified area.

We have become a technological society. Computers, telecommunications and satellites demonstrate everyday our own advanced skill levels and inventiveness.

On the Hooley farm, we're trying to catch up with the rest of society. While everyone else is enjoying the fruits of this age of technology, we're still laboring under the age of the do-whoppy.

Not everyone calls a mechanical piece of equipment bolted together, welded together or barbwired together a do-whoppy. Some call them thingamajigs, do-bohbys, or rigamaroles. When you're stuck in the middle of a hay field with an uncooperative irrigation wheel-line engine, other names to call this do-whoppy-laden machine come to mind, most of which are unprintable here.

Last week, I wrestled with my share of irrigation engine do-whoppys. For the untutored and inexperienced in this low-tech field, every irrigation wheel line is moved up and down a field by a small engine in the center of the wheel line. This engine looks and starts like a lawnmower engine. You jerk-pull a rope with a handle to ignite it.

I think I harbor subconscious hostility toward jerk-pull ropes that start small engines. I've hated to do it ever since I was a kid and my dad told me to start the lawnmower and mow the lawn. I remember I could hardly pull the rope out, much less pull it out fast enough to start the engine.

Then my muscle-bound, weight-lifting brother came along and with a slight flick of his veiny wrist the rope was pulled and the lawnmower was purring along. This damaged my feminine ego. From then on, in my mind, jerk-pulling ropes on select [illegible] were relegated to the male sex. I told myself we girls were better suited for managerial duties.

Now on the farm, stranded in a hay field with only God and the sky as my witness, I long for a managerial task instead of a wheel line engine with a pull-rope. I really doubted whether my weak, doughy arm could jerk-pull this engine to ignition.

I threw my whole body into jerk-pulling that rope. Hair was flying and body was flailing as I threw the rope back, hoping to hear the engine catch and ignite.

You can only do this so many times before you get a tremendous headache. I was huffing and puffing and my arms were aching when I noticed a lever welded at the side of the engine. It was pretty unimpressive. A true do-whoppy if I ever saw one — something somehow attached to this machine to make everything more complicated.

If I hadn't been driven by desperation at that point, I probably wouldn't have even bothered wasting my time with this lever. Against my better instincts I pushed the lever up anyway, jerk-pulled the rope, and, of course, the engine started.

Not being mechanically-minded myself, I always thought the more wiring, more metal and intricacies, the more technically superior the machine. After a week of experiences with different sorts of irrigation equipment saturated with metal and attached intricacies, I realize I have made some incorrect assumptions.

I've found it's not what the machine's got, it's how it goes with what it's got. Large, intricate machines that do one simple chore are not efficient and, therefore, not good machines.

As I've said, we on the Hooley farm are endeavoring to catch up with the technology of the rest of our society. Sometimes after a day of rigamaroling with do-whoppys, I think it's a losing battle.

Dietrich

Hubsmith, "The Dietrich school buildings are in excellent shape. Some things are done every year."

Perron says he tries to anticipate the needs of the schools, and that some remodeling must be done before additional teachers are hired. "But the important thing that makes or breaks a little school is faculty," he says. "With a good teacher they are going to get a good education. I've worked really hard to get and keep quality teachers."

Dietrich teacher Jack Bachtell chose to teach at Dietrich after working for 15 years at larger schools.

Bchtell says he prefers the small school environment and small classes. "I can work with every student here," he says.

In other schools, Bachtell says he taught about 25 students in each class.

"I was losing five students per class," he says. "In Dietrich, with only eight or ten students, I can get through to every kid. I know all the kids and can sit down and talk with them. And there's very little discipline problem."

Like most of Dietrich's nine teachers (three of whom teach part-time), Bachtell teaches a different class every hour, requiring seven preparations for every day.

Bachtell's class load includes English for grades 7 through 12, speech, drama, and developmental reading. He is also the school librarian.

"As far as I know, all of our graduates this year are going to go on (to college)," says Bachtell. "That's 100 percent. I change my curriculum to meet their needs." He may add more work in writing and punctuation, for example, to prepare them for freshman composition classes, he says.

"I think these students are better prepared for college," he says.

Parron says he adjusts the school schedule to include classes required and requested by students. "We rotate class offerings, so we might offer chemistry one year and biology the next," he explains. "And every student but one in our school has taken a computer science class. We put [illegible] ago, and it's a required class now."

Three of Nedra and Roy Hubert's seven children have graduated from Dietrich High School; the other four are now in grades 1 through 10. Of the three DHS graduates, Hubert says two of them have gone on to college.

"They were able to compete equally, but it was hard for them to adjust to classes with so many kids," she says. "Their high school graduating classes had six, seven, and eight students in them. One of our boys was the only boy in his class until he was a junior in high school."

"Our superintendent has done a tremendous job with what he has to work with," says Hubert. "I can't complain for what there is available, but I think there is room for improvement. What our children lack the most is not just different classes but having other kids to associate with."

Says school board chairman Mervyn Ridinger, "We don't have many issues here. We pay the bills and keep decent issues here, keep people happy. We're here to serve the kids.

"The biggest issue here is not enough boys for the girls," he adds. "They'd like to have more things that the bigger schools have for recreation — proms and things like that."

"I would like to see a few more students so they could be more flexible," says Dietrich parent Nancy Bingham. "Some of the teachers have to work all summer to keep ahead of the students."

sent have suffered greatly because of winter service shut-offs, and the INN hopes to document cases of these hardships to present to city attorney Bill Parsons.

Parsons says he had requested specific documentation of these abuses at the April 15 council meeting, but to this date, has received none.

"We will be responsive as far as abuses are concerned," he says, adding the city must receive specific documentation proving they exist before any action can be taken.

No AIDS cases seen yet in southeastern Idaho

POCATELLO (AP) — No confirmed cases of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) have been reported to the Southeastern District Health Department in Pocatello, disease investigator Jack Bennett said.

The health department has received inquiries from health professionals who suspected they helped care for a person suffering from AIDS, Bennett said Tuesday.

But a department investigation, including interviews with doctors caring for the patients in question and a review of laboratory and autopsy reports, revealed reports to be groundless, he said.

"We have not had a confirmed case of AIDS reported to us and we're not presently investigating any possible cases of AIDS," he said.

The health department is the agency which would receive and investigate reports of the communicable disease which is transferred by "intimate personal contact" such as sexual intercourse or through fluid transfer such as injections or blood transfusions, Bennett said.

Although no AIDS case has been reported in date in Idaho, health officials predict it is only a matter of time before the disease, characterized by the complete destruction of the body's immune system, is reported.

As of April, 1983, the Center for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta, Ga., reported 3,954 cases of AIDS had been confirmed in the United States of which 1,723 (43.6 percent) were fatal. Ninety percent of the victims have been between the ages of 20 and 49.

Emphasizing that AIDS is not communicable through "casual contact," Bennett said if a case is confirmed here, health officials would not brand the victim with "a large letter A," but would assist in providing the person and his family with all the information available on the disease.

has been included in any of the previous discussions to date, and that Foleen has said he hates to see full-requirement customers sitting on their hands when issues involving their interest keep surfacing.

The first of these meetings will be held by BPA at the Best Western Burley Inn on May 13 at 1 p.m., said Bradley.

Saying that the bureaucratic procedures of BPA are hard to handle, Bradley said Foleen will be "staying on the WPSS 3 settlement and the proposed surcharges to its customers by BPA on conservation projects."

In other business:

• Bradley told the council because of a policy decision at the council's last meeting which curtailed an early payment discount given to city utility customers, the utility department may realize an extensive profit.

"I feel we owe it to the ratepayers to review the 'situation,'" he said. "The council's Utility Committee would like to pursue the effect of the new rates and the elimination of the discount, to see whether the early payment discount should be reinstated."

The results of the committee's study will be given to the council by fall, so it may make a decision on the policy before the new budget goes into effect on October 1, said Bradley.

• The council heard the first reading of Ordinance 995 which would amend the mayor's salary, which is currently $17,856 per year, to $25,000 annually, starting Jan. 1, 1986.

A first reading of Ordinance 996 also was heard; the ordinance would amend the salary of city council members from the current salary of $200 per month to $300, also starting Jan. 1, 1986.

• Burley City Engineer Don Hill told the council that excessive breakage of the city's low-pressure irrigation lines, caused by winter frost, has created a problem in supplying customers with an ample supply of water.

Hill cited residents, who were installing pumps as part of underground sprinkling systems, as taking more than their share of water.

Since the city presently has no policy regarding this problem, Hill said the council needs to take some action to protect "those residents who are trying to be legitimate."

Students to ride bicycles for research

WENDELL — Cystic Fibrosis is an hereditary lung disease that causes children to suffer to an early death. To raise money for research to cure the tragic disease, the Wendell Kiwanis Club is sponsoring a bike-a-thon on Saturday, starting at 9 a.m. from the high school gymnasium.

Elementary and high school students, who have been gathering pledges for about two weeks, will circle a five-mile course as many times as they can to multiply their pledges.

Bob Burks, Kiwanis Bike-a-Thon chairman, says every merchant in Wendell has made a donation for prizes for the riders who collect the most money. Grand prize is the choice of a small dirt bike or a 10-speed adult bike. Seventeen gift certificates will be awarded and each rider to collect $25 or more will receive a Cystic Fibrosis "I did it" t-shirt.

Last year, grand prize winner was John Bertus, who raised more than $600.

The bicycle route goes east of the gymnasium two miles, south one-half mile, west two miles and one-half mile north on Wendell Street, then back to the gym where riders will be treated to soft drinks and cookies.

There are 130 Cystic Fibrosis research centers in the United States, says Burks, and although the centers can relieve suffering and add a few years to a child's life, the average age of death from this disease is 14 years old.

Statistics show that one in every 20 persons carries the gene for Cystic Fibrosis. If both parents carry the gene, their child will be born with this fungus-like growth that eventually chokes off the cells in the lungs.

Burks says "a whale of a bunch" of students have turned in their pledge sheets and community response has been very good.

U.S. trade deficit soars in first quarter of '85

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States suffered a $28.3 billion merchandise trade deficit from January through March, up 16 percent from the deficit during the last three months of 1984, the government reported Wednesday.

The sharp deterioration came despite the fact that oil imports fell to the lowest level since the early 1970s.

The good news on oil was overshadowed by a big increase in imports of manufactured goods and a sizable decline in agricultural sales overseas, the Commerce Department said.

The new report, which shows merchandise trade on a balance of payments basis, confirms parallel figures released last week showing an even deeper merchandise trade deficit of $32.8 billion for the first three months of 1985.

While the new report covers the same trade, it shows a lower deficit because it omits such factors as military sales and the cost of shipping and insurance.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, commenting on the report, repeated calls for congressional action to lower federal budget deficits as a way to lower the value of the dollar and thus bolster the country's poor trading performance.

He said the trade deficit was "likely to continue to worsen, though not by as much as the first quarter's deterioration."

The surge in imports and weak export sales during the first quarter have been blamed for the sharp slump in overall growth. The economy, as measured by the gross national product, grew at an anemic 1.3 percent rate from January through March, the slowest pace in more than two years.

The new report said imports rose 5 percent and exports dropped 1 percent during the first three months of the year, compared with the October-December quarter.

Imports totaled $84.4 billion from January through March with non-oil imports surging by 11 percent. The big gains in this category were registered by household appliances, automobiles and other manufactured goods.

Oil imports dropped 25 percent from the fourth-quarter level as both the price and the amount of overseas oil declined.

The country imported 4.32 million barrels of oil daily, compared with 5.59 million barrels a day in the October-December quarter. It was the lowest rate since 4.17 million barrels were imported from July through September of 1971.

The price fell from $27.59 per barrel in the fourth quarter to $26.86 per barrel in the first three months this year.

Exports dropped 1 percent to a total of $56.1 billion despite a 44 percent increase in sales of civilian aircraft.

Exports were hurt by an 11 percent slump in sales of U.S. farm products. Agricultural sales totaled $8.5 billion from January through March, compared with $9.5 billion in the last quarter of 1984.

American farmers have seen their sales restricted by the high value of the dollar, which makes their products more expensive on overseas markets.

Wheat shipments dropped 35 percent, corn sales were off 12 percent, soybean sales fell 5 percent and cotton sales dropped 2 percent from levels in the fourth quarter, the government said.

The average price of cotton was down 6 percent, while the price of soybeans and corn both fell 2 percent and the average price of wheat was unchanged.

'Time bomb sitting in the middle of my bill'

Garn opposes Volcker on banking plan

By JILL LAWRENCE
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve Chairman Paul A. Volcker won some support Wednesday in seeking legislation to clear up confusion in the banking industry, but his call for interstate banking authorization was opposed by a key senator.

"There ain't no way we're going to put that provision in this bill," said Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, referring to a measure before the panel. "I see it as a nice little time bomb sitting in the middle of my bill."

Interstate banking is prohibited by federal law except where individual state laws endorse it.

Garn and others on the committee were more receptive to Volcker's plea for congressional action in legal areas where courts, regulators and state legislatures are setting banking policy.

"The situation is a mess as it stands," Volcker said. "I certainly hope you will go ahead and clear up the confusion and give us a fresh sense of direction. The need for legislation is only intensifying as time passes."

PAUL A. VOLCKER
Wants and end to confusion

Garn said the committee wants to do more than close loopholes because "If we did, new loopholes would develop overnight. What is needed is more comprehensive legislation which provides national policy direction to the federal regulators and financial institutions."

The committee is aiming for Senate passage of a banking bill before a summer recess. The Senate approved the bill 89-5 last year, but it died in the House.

The bill as presently written redefines banks and thrift institutions; streamlines the bank and thrift holding company laws; broadens the powers of some holding companies; outlines the scope of state authority regarding bank organization; and starts to develop rules on regional bank expansion.

Volcker said the measure, while "a large step forward," should be strengthened and expanded. He urged:

- A stricter thrift test, saying thrifts should be required to devote at least 65 percent of their own assets to home lending.
- More limits on state powers to authorize new banking activities, saying "parochial competition" for jobs and economic development could undermine the safety and soundness of the banking system.
- Provisions to phase in nationwide interstate banking.

Volcker said regional interstate banking arrangements springing up around the country "can be a rather cozy system." He recommended federal supervision, ground rules and safeguards to ease a transition to full interstate banking.

"There is a certain basic framework that should be imposed by the federal government to make sure those arrangements are in the national interest," Volcker said.

However, Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., said an interstate banking provision would divide the banking committee and damage the chances that the comprehensive banking bill will succeed.

Mild rally fades

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned downward Wednesday as the mild rally of the past four sessions faded.

Oil stocks were generally weak and airlines strong in a fairly active session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 10.71 points in the past four sessions, dropped 2.98 to 1,249.78.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 101.27 million shares, against 100.15 million Tuesday.

In the daily tally on the Big Board, declining issues just barely outnumbered advances. The exchange's composite index of all its listed common stocks dipped .03 to 104.56.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 122.29 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials lost .36 to 200.08, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down .14 at 180.62.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market rose .18 to 281.07. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 225.07, down .97.

Investors proceeded cautiously as the Treasury continued its record sale of $20.5 billion in bonds and notes, which began on Tuesday and continues through Thursday, brokers said.

Interest rates rose in the credit markets Wednesday. Rates on short-term Treasury bills climbed about 5 basis points, or hundredths of a percentage point. Prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, fell more than $5 for every $1,000 in face value.

Oil stocks came under pressure after a prominent Wall Street analyst recommended taking trading profits in a few issues in the group.

Gainers in the airline group included UAL, up 2½ at 46, and AMR, up 1 at 42.

Congress casts an eye on those tax-free employee benefits

Sylvia Porter

If you're among the 55 million working Americans who now receive tax-free benefits from your employer (say, health and life insurance, pension plans, capital accumulation plans, the like), be warned:

Unless you and others are aware and decide to protest, Congress well may pass legislation within a few months to make some or all of those benefits taxable to you or to your employer.

The reasons: The federal deficit is enormous and still growing despite publicized efforts by the administration and Congress to find new sources of revenue to close the budget gap. Employee benefits are a tempting target. Even omitting employer-provided pension contributions, taxing these benefits would bring in $80 billion over five years, estimates the Treasury.

All the flat tax bills now in the congressional hopper, plus the preliminary Treasury tax reform proposal, include some provision for taxing employee benefits, according to James A. Curtis, head of Milliman & Robertson, a top employee benefit consulting firm. "Under any of the proposed legislation for tax reform, the employee would suffer financially," Curtis reports. Will the employer continue to pay the full load for employee benefits that are not deductible? Curtis thinks not.

Employee benefits got a real start in the 1880s and 1890s in the railroad industry. In the depression 1930s, many employee benefit plans went under and led to the Social Security law. During the 1940s and World War II, the War Labor Board's policy was to favor fringe benefits over wage increases as the less inflationary of the two.

Coverage exploded after the war, both in union and in non-union companies.

By 1950, 9.8 million workers were covered. Today's total of 55 million workers balloons with another 100 million dependents directly affected.

The Pension Reform Act of 1974 (ERISA) codified worker pension rights. Now, the growth of private pension plans has become a social objective in this country by consensus. Among the endangered benefits:

- Health insurance. This administration wants to place a "cap" on health insurance premiums and proposes that employer-provided premiums be taxed in excess of $175 a month for families and $70 for singles.
- Life insurance. All premiums for employer-provided life insurance would be taxed under the Treasury's proposals and all other bills.
- Cash accumulation plans. So-called "401(k)" plans, profit sharing and a wide variety of savings plans offered by companies would be completely eliminated under the Treasury's proposal and other bills.
- Pensions. The Treasury's proposal and other bills so far introduced would leave existing tax-deductible limits as they are, but the Bradley-Gephardt proposal would lower those limits. In addition, pension experts believe there is no certainty that employer pension contributions will not be taxed more. The Treasury estimates it loses $56 billion a year because of the favorable tax treatment of employer-provided pension contributions.
- Child care. Employer-provided child care assistance plans would be taxed under all legislation now being considered.
- Cafeteria plans. Under these flexible plans, the employee can select specific benefits and totals to a limit. After the maximum, the employee would have to pay for extra benefits out of his own pocket.

The fight is intensifying among congressional leaders who want to preserve traditional employee benefits and those who believe tax-free fringe benefits are growing at a much faster rate than taxable wages and should be examined as a source of more tax revenue.

Employers must inform employees of what is happening, says Curtis. Unions must become involved. "This is an issue that top management and top union officials should work on together."

Basically, Curtis emphasizes, you, the employee, will determine whether or not your tax-free benefits are preserved. "If employees who would lose benefits would rise to protest their potential loss, their congressmen would listen. Such a campaign," says Curtis, "if properly mounted, could not lose."

Benefits account for more than a third of corporate costs

John Cunniff

NEW YORK — Benefits now account for more than one-third of corporate payroll costs, which shows how far America has gone in reinterpreting the social responsibilities of business.

And the trend is continuing. With rare exceptions, the growth in worker benefits exceeds wage increases each year, and now, says the National Chamber of Commerce, hourly workers average more than $7,500 a year in benefits.

Only a few decades ago, many will recall, it was common to hear corporate chiefs protesting that it wasn't the role of employers to do anything but provide a proper workplace and an income to those employed there.

Many companies went beyond this bare minimum, of course, but often as not they did so out of a sense of paternalism, of charity, or perhaps, because they had some vague notion that benefits increased output.

Those days are almost lost in memory now, and the corporate organization has been remolded to take on a vast variety of social, political, community, environmental, health, education and other tasks.

And if the philosophy of the Reagan administration prevails for another few years, it is likely that even more responsibilities will be transferred from the federal government to the private sector.

Like it or not, business is now being drafted to take on a lot of the obligations that were conceived and nutured by government, but it is also adding many of its own and some that emenate from union halls.

The latest Chamber survey, for 1983, shows that for all employees — hourly and salaried, private and public sector — the total cost of employer-paid benefits was $550 billion, a $40 billion gain in just on year.

The most costly group of benefits, and the fastest growing, includes pensions, insurance, short-term disability and other items agreed upon by workers and employers, averaging $54.10, a 10-year increase of 173 percent.

Two chief types of benefits stood out in the hourly employee survey:

- Non-wage payments for insurance premiums, private pensions, Social Security taxees, unemployment and worker compensation taxes, profit-sharing and similar benefits. Average costs per employee: $98.81 a week.
- Wages paid for time not worked, including vacations, holidays, sick leave and rest periods. Average per employee: $47 a week. Since business must pass on its costs, the big question about all this activity is how efficiently employers are handling their assignments.

The Reagan administration, and millions of ordinary Americans, are convinced that most benefits can be handled better by the private sector, but suspicions arise over that conclusion.

Some people wonder, for example, just how much the benefit load might add to the competitive weakness of many American companies in international markets. Are benefits one reason for the high price of U.S. goods?

Of only slightly less concern is a second important question, one concerning the ability of companies to take on a steadily increasing load of obligations without losing their freedom to operate independently.

Is a company that provides various community services locked into that community even if a plant it operates there is a loser? What happens when a company that has been the primary underwriter of cultural activities finds it can no longer play that role?

In short, can free enterprise eventually lose its freedoms by taking on a bigger and bigger list of personal, social, and cultural obligations?

Utahn plans to renovate aging hotel

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — The 80-year-old Hotel Logan, which has faced condemnation by city building inspectors, will soon be rehabilitated so its 33 low-income residents will not be left without a place to live.

Logan's municipal council has given its endorsement to a federal rental rehabilitation grant that will pay half of the $150,000 necessary to restore the hotel.

The remainder of the cost will be paid by owner Russell Fjelsted, who purchased the hotel in 1967 and began renting it to permanent low-income people. It occupies the upper story of a building where Fjelsted operates a sporting goods store.

Warranty, warning stickers must go on used cars now

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans shopping for used cars will get some help starting today.

It will come in the form of a buyer's guide every dealer must attach to each vehicle telling whether it has a warranty and suggesting pitfalls to avoid.

New Federal Trade Commission regulations require the buyer's guide stickers on all used cars offered for sale by dealers — an estimated 10.5 million vehicles a year. The rule, covering $60 billion in sales, comes after a decade of investigation into the used car business.

"The sticker tells shoppers the most important thing they need to know," who will pay for repairs if the car needs any, said Carol T. Crawford, director of the agency's Bureau of Consumer Protection.

The biggest problem found in a study of used car sales, she added, was dealers selling them "as is," but verbally promising customers that they would fix any problems that came up. Promises that are not in writing cannot be enforced, she noted.

"For the first time, buyers will be able to walk into a used car lot and know up front, in writing, what warranty coverage is being offered," she said.

The rule covers sales of used light trucks as well as used cars by dealers who sell at least six vehicles a year. The roughly 7 million people a year who sell their own used vehicles privately are not covered by the rule.

She declined to estimate the cost of the regulation, but said savings to consumers could range from $500 to $1,500 in repairs on cars with an average price of $3,000 to $4,000.

The sticker must clearly state whether a warranty is offered, and if so, what systems are covered and for how long.

In addition, it urges consumers to get any promises in writing, suggests getting an independent inspection before buying, and provides a list of the major systems of cars and suggesting problems that might occur with them.

Dealers who fail to provide the stickers face fines of up to $10,000 per day for each violation, said Amanda Petersen, the commission's deputy director for consumer protection.

Pamphlets explaining the rule were mailed to the nation's 89,000 used car dealers two weeks ago, she said.

"Consumers should look for the stickers starting (Thursday), and we want to hear from them if they're not seeing them," she told a news conference.

The regulation has generated controversy because it does not contain a provision, originally proposed, which would have required dealers to tell customers about anything they knew was wrong with a car.

Consumer groups have been critical of the agency for deleting that provision, stating that it removed essential protections needed by consumers.

"I think that the rule will go into effect without notice and without effect. It simply misses what consumers want to know when buying a car, and that is, what's wrong with it," said Clarence Ditlow, head of the Washington-based Center for Auto Safety.

Commissioner Patricia P. Bailey dissented in last year's 3-1 vote to impose the regulation, saying that deleting a requirement that defects be made public resulted in the rule being little more than a consumer edu[illegible] sign.

However, keeping that provision would have promised protection it really couldn't deliver, Ms. Crawford said, because it only dealt with problems the dealer was aware of — and the dealer [illegible] have inspected the car.

Lumber firm moves offices and cuts staff

BOISE (AP) — Boise Cascade Corp. has completed the transfer of its wood-products marketing operations from Portland to Boise, including about 40 sales, marketing and data-processing jobs.

Another 36 employees have been hired or transferred from other company operations to work on the wood-products marketing staff, said spokeswoman Linda Alden. She said Boise Cascade plans to add a few more people to the staff, bringing the employment level to 76 to 80, but the wood-products marketing staff has been reduced from the 112 people employed in Portland.

"The move did reflect some cost-savings for us. It allowed us to eliminate duplicate positions," she said.

When the company announced the relocation from Portland, in November, officials said about 50 people would be given a chance to relocate. Forty of the 50 employees, including most of the wood-products marketing senior management, accepted the transfer, Ms. Alden said.

The paper and wood products company says it will save the cost of office space in Portland and hopes for better coordination between manufacturing and marketing by bringing the marketing staff closer to regional plants.

"The move reflects a shift of emphasis to wood-products marketing to inland plants," Alden said.

The marketing staff is responsible for the sale of lumber, plywood and other wood products produced by the company's 23 mills in the Pacific Northwest. Those mills are now concentrated in inland areas after Boise Cascade closed five wood-products plants on the Oregon and Washington coast last year, Ms. Alden said.

New 'Coke' can allows space shuttle sipping

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Coca-Cola, which is available virtually around the world, may be carried into orbit aboard the space shuttle in July in a special container developed at a cost of more than $250,000.

The Coca-Cola Co. announced Tuesday that the special steel can has solved the problem of keeping carbonated drinks from inadvertently escaping their containers in the weightlessness and low pressure inside spacecraft.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration confirmed that discussions with Coca-Cola have been underway and that a test flight is under study, but Johnson Space Center spokesman Jack Riley said no agreement has been reached.

A statement from NASA said the earliest flight under consideration for the soft drink is the Spacelab 2 mission on space shuttle Challenger, scheduled for launch on July 15. The mission is a seven-day flight with a crew of seven.

A news release by the Atlanta-based Coca-Cola Co. says the company has spent more than $250,000 to develop the "Coke Space Can."

Conventional drink containers do not work in space, because there is no gravity to pull the fluid out, so astronauts sip fluids from straws placed into plastic containers that collapse as they are emptied.

Carbonated drinks have the additional problem of spewing under the force of expanding gas when introduced into reduced pressure. The space shuttle cabin pressure is reduced to 10.2 pounds per square inch, compared with a normal sea level pressure of 14, during preparation for spacewalks.

According to Coca-Cola, the new "Space Can" has an internal dispensing mechanism that compensates for the absence of gravity. The package has a drinking spout activated by a lever valve. The can includes a screw-on safety cap and a safety valve lock.

Water Power chief retiring

SPOKANE (AP) — Wendell J. Satre, 66, is retiring as board chairman of Washington Water Power Co. May 10 after nearly 46 years with the Spokane-based electric and gas utility.

A native of nearby Post Falls, Idaho, Satre earned a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering from the University of Idaho and joined WWP in 1939 as customer service representative.

Over the next 25 years he worked as a residential salesman, electrical engineer, operating engineer, superintendent of production, construction manager and executive assistant to the president.

In 1965 Satre was named vice president and elected to the board of directors, advancing to executive vice president later that year, president in 1971 and chairman in 1975.

He became chief executive officer and chairman in 1982 but relinquished the former title to his successor, Paul A. Redmond, in November when he announced plans to retire.

Railroads seeking to drop old line

KOOSKIA (AP) — Burlington Northern Railroad and its Camas Prairie subsidiary have advised state officials they intend to seek federal approval to abandon 1.9 miles of rail line between Kooskia and Stites in Idaho County.

Company officials told the Public Utilities Commission that they want to drop the line because it is no longer used.

The Kooskia-Stites leg is the last on the Camas Prairie track that starts in Lewiston and runs through Orofino and Kamiah to Kooskia.

Although state regulators have no control over rail abandonments, a new state law has given them power to seek public comments on such proposals and hold public hearings if necessary before making a recommendation to the ICC.

i. Comment Date: June 10, 1985.
j. Expiration of Initial License: June 10, 1984
k. Description of Project: The project proposed for relicensing would consist of the facilities currently licensed as Project No. 18, including: (1), the Twin Falls dam, which has three sections, a concrete arch dam across the north falls with a 474-foot-long overflow crest at elevation 3508 feet, 3511.4 feet with flashboards, a non-overflow concrete gravity dam across the south falls with a 203-foot-long crest at elevation 3520 feet, and a concrete dike across the island between the north and south falls in two sections, one 108 feet long with the crest at elevation 3516 feet and the other 207 feet long with the crest at elevation 3509 feet, 3512 feet with flashboards; (2) the Twin Falls reservoir, which has a storage capacity of about 1000 acre-feet at normal pool elevation 3511.4 feet; (3) a gated intake structure in the non-overflow gravity section; (4) a 10-foot-diameter, 136-foot-long inclined penstock; (5) a 40-foot-long, 37-foot-wide concrete powerhouse containing a generating unit with a rated capacity of 9 MW and an average annual energy output of 65.8 GWh; and (6) a 1-mile-long, 138 kV transmission line connecting to the Applicant's distribution system. The existing project will be subject to Federal takeover upon expiration of the initial license under Sections 14 and 15 of the Federal Power Act. As of July 1, 983, the Applicant's estimated net investment in the project is $1,074,017 and estimated severance damages are $126,070,341.
1. This notice also consists of the following standard paragraphs: A3, A9, B, and C.
A3. License or Conduit Exemption - - Any qualified license, conduit exemption, or small hydroelectric exemption applicant desiring to file a competing application must submit to the Commission, on or before the specified comment date for the particular application, either a competing license, conduit exemption, or small hydro-electric exemption application, or a notice of intent to file such an application. Submission of a timely notice of intent allows an interested person to file the competing license, conduit exemption, or small hydroelectric exemption application no later than 120 days after the specified comment date for the particular application. Applications for preliminary permit will not be accepted in response to this notice.
The provision is subject to the following exception: if an application described in this notice was filed by the preliminary permittee during the term of the permit, a small hydroelectric exemption application may be filed by the permittee only (license and conduit exemption applications are not affected by this restriction).
A9. Notice of Intent - - A notice of intent must specify the exact name, business address, and telephone number of the prospective applicant, include an unequivocal statement of intent to submit, if such an application may be filed, either (1) a preliminary permit application or (2) a license, small hydroelectric exemption, or conduit exemption application, and be served on the applicant(s) named in this public notice.
B. Comments, Protests, or Motions to Intervene - - Anyone may submit [illegible] to intervene in accordance with the requirements of the Rules of Practice and Procedure, 18 C.F.R. paragraph 385.210, .211, .214. In determining the appropriate action to take, the Commission will consider all protests or other comments filed, but only those who file a motion to intervene in accordance with the Commission's Rules may become a party to the proceeding. Any comments, protests, or motions to intervene must be received on or before the specified comment date for the particular application.
C. On Wednesday, the 28th day of August, 1985, at the hour of 10:30 o'clock A.M., of said day, at the office of TitleFact, Inc., 163 4th Avenue North Twin Falls, Idaho, LAWYERS TITLE COMPANY OF IDAHO will sell, to the highest bidder for cash or cash equivalent, lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale, the following described real estate, situated as follows to-wit:

Lot 21 in Block 1 in AMENDED PLAT NO. 1 OF WILLOW LANE SUBDIVISION, Twin Falls County, Idaho, according to the Plat thereof recorded in Volume 6 of Plats, Page 13, records of said County.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession, or encumbrances, to satisfy the obligations secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust, dated March 5, 1979 by ROBERT L. HYDE and JANET E. HYDE, husband and wife as Grantor to Lawyers Title Company of Idaho as the present Trustee for the benefit and security of OLD STONE MORTGAGE, formerly known as Sherwood Roberts, a Washington Corporation as the present Beneficiary, recorded on April 5, 1979 in the Official Records of Twin [illegible] County, Idaho as Recorder's Instrument No. 756394. The Grantors named herein are listed to comply with Section 45-1506 (4) (a) of the Idaho Code: No representation is made whether or not they are currently responsible for the obligation listed herein.

Foreclosure is being effected because of default in the payment of the obligation due and owing from the Grantor to Beneficiary and evidenced by a Promissory Note, which said obligation is secured by the said Deed of Trust, said default consisting of failure to make regularly scheduled monthly payments of $327.48 due the first of July, 1984, and due on the first of every month thereafter.

By reason of said default, the Beneficiary has exercised its option in the Deed of Trust to declare the entire indebtedness and accrued interest, late charges, attorney's fees, trustee's fee, and other costs or expenses associated with this foreclosure to be due and payable. The principal balance owing as of this date is $37,420.99 plus accrued interest at the rate of 9.50 per cent per annum since June 1, 1984, plus late charges of $15.30 per month, plus attorney's fees, trustee's fees and any other costs or expenses associated with this foreclosure as provided by the Deed of Trust, the Promissory Note or Idaho Law.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR
AGENCY: Bureau of Land Management
ACTION: Notice of Realty Action, I-21401, Competitive Sale of Public Lands in Twin Falls County, Idaho.

SUMMARY: The following described lands have been examined and through development of land use decisions based on public input, it has been determined that the sale of the tract is consistent with section 203(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act (FLPMA) of 1976. The land will be offered for sale using modified competitive bidding procedures for no less than the appraised fair market value indicated below. Any bids for less than such value will be rejected as required by FLPMA. The adjacent landowners, Bill Pullin, Ron Waller, Edwin Crockett, Vicki Patrick, James L. Marr and Keith Sligar will be given preference rights as designated bidders in accordance with 43 CFR 2711.3-2. This preference right gives those designated bidders who submit a valid bid the opportunity to match the highest bid. Only sealed bids will be accepted. In the case where two or more designated bidders exercise their preference right, the designated bidders shall be offered the opportunity to agree upon a division of the lands among themselves. In the absence of a written agreement, the preference right bidders will be allowed to continue bidding to determine the high bidder. A bid will also constitute an application for conveyance of the mineral rights, except geothermal, oil and gas. The mineral interests being offered for conveyance have no known monetary value. Each bidder must submit a fifty dollar ($50.00) non-returnable filing fee for the mineral conveyance (43 CFR 2711.3-1(d)), with the bid. Failure to deposit these sums will result in disqualification as the high bidder. The authorized officer shall then determine whether to accept the next highest bid, withdraw the public lands from the market or re-offer them for sale at a later date.

Legal Description: T. 11 S., R. 13 E., B.M. Sec. 35: SW¼NE¼
Acres: 40
Market Value: $8,000.00

The lands are hereby segregated from appropriation under the public land laws, including the mining laws as provided by 43 CFR 2711.1-2(d). The segregative effect of the NORA shall terminate upon issuance of patent or other document of conveyance to such lands, upon publication in the Federal Register of a termination of the segregation, or 270 days from the date of publication, whichever occurs first.

The patent, when issued, will contain certain reservations to the United States and be subject to existing rights-of-ways. Detailed information concerning these reservations as well as additional information concerning the land, terms and conditions of the sale and bidding instructions may be obtained from Jim Pribble or Sharon LaBrecque at the Burley Office, Bureau of Land Management, 200 South Oakley Highway, Burley, Idaho.

Dates: All sealed bids must be received by 1:30 p.m. on June 26, 1985. At this time all bids will be opened at the Burley District Office.

Supplementary Information: For a period of 45 days from the date of publication in the Federal Register, interested parties may submit comments to the District Manager, Bureau of Land Management, Route 3, Box 1, Burley, Idaho 83318.

Objections will be reviewed by the State Director who may sustain, vacate or modify this realty action. In the absence of any objections, this realty action will become the final determination of the Department of the Interior.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On Wednesday, the 11th of September, 1985 at the hour of 10:00 o'clock A.M. of said day, at the office of TitleFact, Inc., 163 Fourth Avenue North, Twin Falls, Idaho, LAWYERS TITLE COMPANY OF IDAHO will sell, to the highest bidder for cash or cash equivalent, lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale, the following described real estate, situated as follows, to wit:

Exhibit "A"

A parcel of land located in Lots 9 and 10, Block 2 of SUBURBAN PARK ADDITION to Twin Falls, Idaho, as shown in the plat records of Twin Falls County, Idaho, in SECTION 9, Township 10 South, Range 17 East of the Boise Meridian, Twin Falls County, Idaho, more particularly described as follows:

BEGINNING at a point on the West line of said Lot 9 which bears South 145.40 feet from the Northwest corner thereof;
THENCE South along the West line of said Lot 10, 49 feet, more or less, to a point which bears South 145.35 feet from the Northwest corner of Lot 10;
THENCE East 124.98 feet, to a point on the East line of lot 10, which bears South 39.11 feet from the Northeast corner thereof;
THENCE North along the East line of Lot 10 and continuing along the East line of Lot 9, 49 feet, more or less, to a point which bears South 145.35 feet from the Northeast corner of said Lot 9;
THENCE West 124.98 feet to the Point of Beginning.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession, or encumbrances, to satisfy the obligations secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust, dated February 27, 1980 by LAWRENCE J. BOEKE, an unmarried man as Grantor to Lawyers Title Company of Idaho as the present Trustee for the benefit and security of SHERWOOD & ROBERTS, now known as OLD STONE MORTGAGE, a Washington corporation as the present Beneficiary, recorded on March 3, 1980 in the Official Records of Twin Falls County, Idaho as Document No. 778142. The Grantors named herein are listed to comply with Section 45-1506 (4) (a) of the Idaho Code. No representation is made whether or not they are currently responsible for the obligation listed herein.

Foreclosure is being effected because of default in the payment of the obligation due and owing from the Grantor to Beneficiary and evidenced by a Promissory Note which said obligation is secured by the said Deed of Trust, said default consisting of failure to make regularly scheduled monthly payments of $149.34 due on October 1, 1984, and due on the first of every month thereafter.

By reason of said default, the beneficiary has exercised its option in the Deed of Trust to declare the entire indebtedness and accrued interest, late charges, attorney's fees, trustee's fees, and other costs or expenses associated with this foreclosure to be due and payable. The principal balance owing as of this date is $19,274.88 plus accrued interest at the rate of 13.0 per cent per annum since September 1, 1984 plus late charges of $5.97 per month, plus attorney's fees, trustee's fees and any other costs or expenses associated with this foreclosure as provided by the Deed of Trust, the Promissory Note or Idaho Law.

THE ACES® BOBBY WOLFF

"Silence gives consept, or a horrible cry — that nobody's listening."

The opponents interfere with your Blackwood request and partner passes. Is he trying to tell you something, dr are you wondering if he heard your bid? Those who play DOPI over Blackwood interference have a solution for this problem.

After West has interfered with South's Blackwood inquiry, North must have some method to show how many aces he has. An effective tool is DOPI, an acronym that serves to jog the memory. The letters stand for Double equals 0-aces; Pass equals 1 ace. If responder has more than one ace, he bids one step higher over the interfering bid for each additional ace.

Today's North passes five spades to show one ace. Had he held none, he would have doubled. Had he held two, he would have bid five no-trump.

The play has some interest. After South ruffs the second spade, he must be careful in trumps. If he cashes the ace first, the slam goes down.

Since it was West who promised the long suit, South should lead a low trump to dummy's king first. When West discards, the rest is easy.

DOPI is an effective convention and easy to remember. However, don't expect your partner to know about it unless you take the time to agree upon its use.

Baseball expects bad news on drug

By ALAN ROBINSON

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL

PITTSBURGH — Baseball's hierarchy is bracing itself for the outcome of a probe of possible drug deals involving major league players, as a federal grand jury's four-month investigations appears to be nearing an end.

The panel's findings, which may be presented next week, are expected to implicate Pittsburgh-are drug dealers, players who allegedly made purchases from them and other players who reportedly acted as go-betweens, according to sources who spoke on the condition that they not be identified.

"I think it's going to be bad," Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth said Wednesday on NBC's "Today" show. "There will be things that will be damaging to the game."

Ueberroth's comments followed his call Tuesday for mandatory drug testing of all baseball personnel other than major league players. The players' union and club management have an anti-drug program that permits testing only in certain circumstances.

"We've got to stop drugs in baseball," Ueberroth said. "We just flat have to do it."

The grand jury, under the direction of U.S. Attorney J. Alan Johnson, has heard testimony from 10-15 players, who have been granted immunity from prosecution.

Among those testifying were three players who previously admitted cocaine use — Lonnie Smith of the St. Louis Cardinals, Tim Raines of the Montreal Expos and Rod Scurry of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Keith Hernandez of the New York Mets; Dale Berra of the New York Yankees, who played with the Pirates until this season; Al Holland and Lee Mazzilli of the Pirates; Enos Cabell of the Houston Astros, and Lee Lacy of the Baltimore Orioles, another former Pirate, also appeared before the panel.

"You know that players have been naming other players when they got behind those closed doors," Madlock, the Pirates' player representative.

Johnson, 41, has refused to comment on the grand jury probe, saying, "I can't even confirm there is an investigation."

But in his 3½ years as chief federal prosecutor for western Pennsylvania, Johnson has prosecuted numerous drug dealers.

NBC, meanwhile, reported Tuesday that the federal probe was being expanded to other cities, including Atlanta and St. Louis.

Pittsburgh, according to baseball insiders, is said to be one of the major league cities where players can easily obtain drugs.

As part of the investigation, restaurants frequented by players reportedly were put under surveillance and stricter security was enforced at entrances to Three Rivers Stadium.

"Some (players) acquired the drugs or had these transactions in or near the ballparks," said Sam Reich, an attorney for several of the players, including Raines, who testified before the panel.

Reich, however, told NBC that the "alleged activities are of a fairly moderate scale."

"In my opinion, it is unlikely any player would be a target of prosecution unless perjury has been committed," he said.

Ueberroth's plan would require testing of everyone from owners to minor league players.

Mandatory drug tests for major league players are prohibited by the players' contract with the owners, but Ueberroth said he will ask the players' union to approve the mandatory tests for players as well. Don Fehr, acting executive director of the Major League Players Association, called Ueberroth's proposal "grandstanding."

"We already have a joint drug program and it's working," Fehr said. "We've always felt that mandatory testing was demeaning."

Testing minor league players is OK, and many teams, including the Pirates, conduct such exams, which will be mandatory under Ueberroth's

Cisowski opts to join 'Yotes

By The Times-News

CALDWELL — College of Southern Idaho guard Lowell Cisowski has signed a letter of intent to play basketball next year at the College of Idaho.

Cisowski, a first-team all-Region 18 selection last winter, will join teammate Kevin Hulsey, who earlier committed to the Coyotes.

Cisowski, a 6-foot-3 native of Gary, Ind., led the Eagles in scoring last season with a 19.3-point average, pulled down 4.3 rebounds and dished out 3.9 assists in his sophomore season. He also visited Idaho State, Augusta (Ga.) College and Kent State.

"Cisowski is an exceptional student/athlete," said C of I Coach Marty Holly. "He's just the kind of player we look for at the College of Idaho. His grade point average is above a 3.0 and he is a quality athlete."

Besides Cisowski and Hulsey, the Coyotes also signed John Cromartie, a 6-1 guard from Seattle who played the last two years at Edmonds (Wash.) Community College.

C of I has won the last two NAIA Northwest regional champions and has gone to the NAIA national tournament for the past two years.

Of the members of CSI Coach Fred Trenkle's 1984-85 team, five have now signed with four-year schools. Guard Jeff Logan and forward Derrick Hopkins have transferred to Sacramento State while forward Aaron Combs will enroll at Long Beach State.

Guard Larry Brown, the team's No. 2 scorer last season, is considering offers from several schools.

Trojans expected to dominate MVC

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

JEROME — Raft River High School track coach Oland Wallace insists that today's Magic Valley Conference meet won't be an anti-climax.

That would be a tough point to sell to the other five MVC coaches at the 4 p.m. event, which will be held at Jerome High School's track.

The Trojans, the defending conference champions in both the boys' and girls' team competition, haven't been touched by their MVC neighbors in head-to-head faceoffs this year. In the only other all-MVC meet of the spring, Raft River's girls outdistanced second-place Hagerman by 80 points and the Trojan boys defeated the runner-up Pirates by 34 points.

"We've got a lot of kids sick right now," says Wallace. "Losing one or two kids won't hurt us that much because we get most of our points from second, third and fourth places. But if many more than that can't run, we'll be hurting."

The biggest question mark is sprinter Wendy Smith, a contender along with Bliss' Lois Hobdey and Valley's Lori Reed for one of District 4's four berths to state in the 100 meters and with Kimberly's Teresa Wright and teammate Kristine Keetch in the 200. Smith, who is injured and questionable for today's meet, won the 100, finished third in the 200 and ran a leg on the winning quarter-mile relay team in the only other MVC meet of the spring.

Wallace thinks today's team competition will be particularly tight in the boys' events, pointing to Oakley's strong showing in the weights at last weekend's Declo Invitational and to respectable performances by Hagerman in meets with bigger schools earlier this spring in Wendell and Glenns Ferry.

"I look for a pretty tight race between us, Hagerman, Castleford and Oakley," says Wallace. "We've all been kind of bunched together in meets that we've run in this year and with coaches changing people around, it could make a difference."

If Smith is healthy, Wallace thinks she could vie for a conference record in the 100, and he expects that the Trojans' 400 relay team, anchored by Smith, could take a shot at the league record in the event.

Athletes will be seeded for next weekend district meet on the basis of their finishes today.

Vikes, Glenns Ferry favored in Canyon

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — When the Canyon Conference track teams convene here Friday for their annual meet, the question will be "what can be done about the Valley boys and Glenns Ferry girls."

Based on the experiences of the regular season, the answer seems "not very much."

Those two teams should collect team titles Friday when competition begins at 1 p.m. with field events and 3,200-meter finals on the Kimberly High School track.

Since all the teams are bringing full contingents, it doesn't appear time for the others to start making up the depth deficit they face against the favorites, who are the defending conference and District 4 Class A-3 champions. That could start coming into play next week when district qualifying starts clipping those secondary points both Valley and Glenns Ferry have feasted upon all year.

But that's a week away if the possibility even arises.

In the boys' division there appears little anyone can do about Viking pole vaulter Ryan Clark, who is the best in the state. However, Declo can neutralize those points, probably with second- and third-place finishes in the event.

On the track, Valley sends Todd Schutte as the favorite in at least the 200 and 400 dashes, with Wendell trying to deny that with Eric Wennmeister and Chad Hope.

Valley's other strength is in its relays, particularly the 800 and 1600.

Glenns Ferry has a strong 1-2 punch in the field events with Carol and Claudette Williams, who could mine the weights for 36 points between them. The major problem there is Kimberly's Cindy Holcomb who is capable of winning the shotput.

Coach Ken Fast has entries galore in the rest of the events and anticipates taking a place or two in just about all of them. Kristi Stumpson gives the Pilots a possible double up in the distances "and we're sure thankful for her," says Fast.

The individual events are somewhat dependent on how coaches decide to use their talent. Kimberly usually has a strong relay corps because Coach Jean Emerson likes it that way. However, Teresa Wright probably will take a couple of events, particularly if she shows up in the long sprints.

"I think Filer will run strong against us and Kimberly, with Teresa Wright and Holcomb people like

Drugs laws just don't apply to coke users in big-time sports

Steve Crump

You could win the American League West championship with a team composed of players who have been questioned by the Pittsburgh federal grand jury that is currently investigating cocaine use by baseball players.

Maybe even the National League West.

The players subpoenaed were only asked about possible drug use on their present and former teams. And they're immune from prosecution.

The federal government is going after the dealers, the go-betweens and the guys who make the buys.

So in a week or so, you'll see photos of shady looking characters with their heads covered by their coats being hustled into courthouses to be arraigned. There will be much hand-wringing and head-shaking about the pressures of pro sports that drive athletes to use drugs.

And the snow will continue to fall in clubhouses and lockerrooms.

The tolerance in this society for drug abuse by our designated heroes is nothing short of amazing.

The story is familiar enough. An athlete is caught with several grams of coke and arrested. His attorney proclaims his innocence and his team professes its support. If he is charged with a criminal offense, he checks in to a voluntary drug treatment program and three weeks later the charges are dropped or he is given probation — maybe a dozen hours of community service. If no charges are brought, the incident is quietly forgotten.

Baseball and pro basketball have drug treatment programs, but baseball doesn't even require players to be tested. The NBA's agreement with its players' association permits players to be kicked out of the game, but only two have been so penalized and one of them is attempting a comeback.

The NCAA, of course, has no drug enforcement authority. Such discipline that exists is done by its member schools.

The bottom line is that there is nowhere in big-time sports that a player can't get out of cocaine trouble with a good lawyer and a release from a doctor.

If you or I, by contrast, get caught with several grams of coke and arrested, how far will pleas about the pressures of our jobs get us?

There are, of course, very successful athletes who have licked drug or alcohol problems with a lot of hard work and courage. They deserve admiration. But sports isn't supposed to be an object lesson in chemical abuse.

Yet there are times, like right now, when it seems as if that's what it's all about.

Kids still emulate athletic heroes, and they know that one of the lures of success in big-time sports is cocaine. They also know that successful athletes who get caught don't get punished.

A lot of that is because there's no pressure to do so. Fans still pay to watch drug users. Owners still give them seven-figure contracts. Judges still buy alibis about coke being a palliative for fatigue or injury. Doctors still check them out of their drug treatment centers after a decent interval.

If drug abuse in this society is a crime, it's a crime for everybody. Especially for the strongest and the swiftest.

The victims of this double standard are neither the athletes nor the sports they play. They are the kids on the playground who learn what is really for sale for a rolled-up $100 bill.

Outfitters want more licenses

Outdoors

BOISE (AP) — The state's outfitters and guides, caught by the unprecedented rush of nonresidents to obtain Idaho deer and elk hunting tags for this season, could sustain severe economic losses if additional tags are not made available, a spokesman says.

"We need some special consideration to provide some special services to the community," R.J. Lewy, a spokesman for the Idaho Outfitters and Guides Association, told the Fish and Game Commission Wednesday. "We need some immediate action."

But the commission, still feeling the sting of criticism from its decision to increase the nonresident elk tag quota by 1,000 this winter, declined to take any action on the request.

Chairman Fred Christensen said that any attempt to further increase nonresident tags would be met with a public outcry. Christensen said, however, that the commission would work with the guides in an attempt to find some solution.

Nonresident deer tags were sold out Monday, more than three months earlier than last year, and officials expect the elk tags to be sold out by month's end.

But Lewy and other association officials said most of the state's guides and outfitters still have half of their big game hunt bookings unsold for this year.

"If that's the case for 1985, we're going to have an awful lot of outfitters lose money this year, and some of them will go out of business," he said. He supported his plea for aid by pointing out the multimillion-dollar infusion guided big game hunts provide to the state's economy each year.

With about 2,800 nonresident elk tags still available, Lewy asked the commission to simply earmark 500 or 1,000 of them for guides until September so they would be able to provide hunts for clients wanting to sign up this summer.

He also suggested that the commission in future years set aside until Sept. 1 up to 40 percent of all nonresident elk and deer tags for guides. Those unused by that time could then be sold to nonresident applicants.

But Commissioner Pete Thompson warned that such a plan would lead to a system of nonresident hunting by guide only in Idaho, and Department Director Jerry Conley warned of potential legal problems that could result in voiding the state's quota system for nonresidents.

One possible way of dealing with the problem, Commissioner Norm Guth said, would be to significantly increase the cost of a nonresident tag, now $152 for elk, since price increases tend to slow demand for the permits.

But any of those actions, commission officials said, would take some time to comply with state administrative rules procedures.

Lendl, McEnroe win

NEW YORK (AP) — John McEnroe and Ivan Lendl, the top two seeds, moved easily Wednesday into the third round of the $617,000 Tournament of Champions at the West Side Tennis Club where they were joined by giant-killer Lawson Duncan.

Duncan, a U.S. Junior Davis Cup member in 1983, upset fifth-seeded Johan Kriek 6-3, 6-3 on the clay courts of the famed club in Forest Hills.

Among others posting second-round victories Wednesday were third-seeded Aaron Krickstein, No. 4 Henrik Sundstrom of Sweden, No. 7 Brad Gilbert, No. 8.

that can make it pretty tough for us," Fast said. "We like to think we're pretty strong and we do stand a good chance of doing well in this meet."

But Fast still is looking forward another week to district when his team could be stronger.

"We're starting to get some of our girls back from leg injuries," he said, noting Ada Rivera, a former district champion, still hasn't received clearance to "blow full bore out of the blocks" because of knee problems. She has seen some relay action and probably will Friday. Another, freshman Jody Fast who has been hampered all spring by quadricep muscle problems, may see some open action but is scheduled for relay work thereafter.

Northside to hold pre-district meet to qualify today

By SCOTT TUDEHOPE
Times-News writer

CAREY — It's the last call for Northside Conference track hopefuls.

Today's meet features Bliss, Gooding State, Camas County, Carey, Ketchum/Sun Valley, Richfield and Dietrich, but unless the times and distances are better than earlier performances, athletes won't be able to attend the District 4 meet next week at Jerome.

Last week Carey won the conference title for both girls and boys, a feat which Panther Coach Blaine attributes to old-fashioned dedication.

"We have a hard-working bunch of kids," Tingey said. "They've really trained and worked out. You know, it's really tempting for seniors at this time of year to not care so much. Not this bunch."

Kendall Peck is Carey's hope in the 800 meters by posting a time of 2 minutes, 10 seconds, while also working on his form in the triple jump, long jump, and most recently, the pole vault.

But it was the relays that have proven so successful for Carey, and which could help them again today.

"The last two weeks we swept the relays — we took first in every one," explained Tingey. "We're strong there."

A typical winning combination looks like this in the 400, when Kevin Willard, Scott Pyrah, Mint Peterson and Will Neal team up.

In the weights, Gooding State's Todd Kimes appears certain to dominate the shot put and discus, while Dietrich's Jason Miller will probably represent the Blue Devils in the distance events.

Roddy Cabbage, Gooding State, will get the nod in the sprints, while Bliss' Ritchie Graves is strong there as well.

For the girls, Carey Coach Vern Jolley said that Robin Conrad's school-record-breaking shot put toss of 32 feet was indicative of some of the better efforts of the day.

And while Conrad can be expected to be seen at district, the 800-meter relay team of Joanie Sparks, Dodie Youre, Kelly Wharton and Denise Parke, might also be seen.

"The biggest challenge will be Bliss," said Jolley. "They'll be really strong in the 400 relay. They've probably the best team in the A-1."

The district meet will held on Thursday, May 16, and Saturday, May 18, in Jerome.

Pirates scouting director Branch Rickey said 10 percent of the organization's minor leaguers tested positively for drugs last summer, and that those players were urged to seek counseling or treatment.

"There's no way the players' association will agree to testing. They fought when the Dodgers put testing in some of their contracts," Mazzilli said.

"I think it's a good idea," Pittsburgh catcher Tony Pena said. "They should test everybody. I love baseball and I don't want anything to happen to it."

But in Atlanta, Braves captain Bob Horner said: "He'll never get it."

"The guys who are on drugs in this league are obvious. If clubs paid close attention to how a guy is playing or acting, they'd spot 'em, too. You're talking about 50 guys, while 600 are clean. That's not justification for testing," Horner said.

Dale Murphy, the Braves' two-time National League Most Valuable Player, said Ueberroth's plan is similar to "assuming a guy is guilty without knowing. It's making somebody prove their innocence without knowing he's guilty."

Dale Murphy, the two-time National League most valuable player, said Ueberroth's plan is like "assuming a guy is guilty without knowing. It's making somebody prove their innocence without knowing he's guilty."

Several of the Braves said they believe the drug agreement negotiated with the owners last summer is adequate to solve any problem.

"The clubs have a right, if they detect a problem, to take a player before three experts. They are protected by this agreement," said first baseman Chris Chambliss. "They haven't even given it a chance to work. If they see a player performing poorly or acting strangely, they can do something about it."

Claudell Washington, who has undergone drug treatment and who faces a marijuana possession charge in California, agreed with Chambliss. "I don't understand the reasoning," he said. "We have a program in effect. I think it will work."

Atlanta relief pitcher Terry Forster said he wouldn't trust the owners to conduct such drug tests.

"With all the big contracts some owners would like to get rid of, who's to say they wouldn't take a guy's test, drop some pill in it and say he's tested positive?" Forster said. "I could see some shady things happening."

Cleveland first baseman Mike Hargrove was bothered by the sweeping insinuation.

"Just because I play baseball doesn't mean I use drugs," Hargrove said. "It doesn't make any difference to me. I can see both sides of the argument. It is an invasion of privacy, though, and that bothers me."

Detroit pitcher Jack Morris, as well as New York Yankee outfielder-designated hitter Don Baylor, agreed.

AL: Moore no-hits Brew for 8

Baseball

MILWAUKEE (AP) — It was a night to remember for Seattle's Mike Moore — back to Little League days.

Moore came within three outs of a no-hitter before he was shelled by four singles in the ninth, and the Mariners held on to beat the Milwaukee Brewers 4-2 Wednesday night.

The no-hit bid ended on Robin Yount's leadoff single in the ninth inning.

"I haven't thrown anything close to this since Little League," said Moore, who gave up two runs on four hits, four walks and had eight strikeouts. "We were having a good time on the bench, everybody was kidding around."

Moore had everything going his way until the ninth inning with Yount lined a single up the middle on a 2-0 count.

"I was just looking for a good pitch," said Yount.

After popouts by Doug Loman and Cecil Cooper, the Brewers rapped three consecutive singles to chase the right-hander.

"He was throwing hard tonight," Yount said of the 25-year-old pitcher. "That's his strongpoint. He's an overpowering-type pitcher, and he was overpowering tonight."

Seattle Manager Chuck Cottier went out to the mound in the sixth inning after Moore gave up consecutive walks to Ed Romero and Yount with two outs.

"I was going to leave him in until they got a hit off him — unless the score got to be 4-3," he said.

"He had his night's work in after he lost the no-hitter, then the shutout," he added. "He had good command of his pitches. He was getting his breaking ball over and he had good velocity on his fastball."

Chicago 4
Cleveland 0

CLEVELAND (AP) — Ron Kittle and Jerry Hairston slugged solo home runs and Britt Burns combined with three relievers on a three-hitter Wednesday night, giving the Chicago White Sox a 4-0 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Burns, 4-2, blanked the Indians on three singles through five innings, striking out three and walking none before leaving the game because of slight stiffness in his lower back.

Gene Nelson pitched hitless relief through the eighth, Juan Agosto retired the first two batters in the ninth, and Bob James got Julio Franco on a grounder for the final out.

Boston 6
California 1

BOSTON (AP) — Tony Armas drove in two runs with a homer and a single and Jackie Gutierrez contributed a two-run single Wednesday night as the Boston Red Sox beat the California Angels 6-1 behind the four-hit pitching of Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd.

Boyd, who had a 15-inning scoreless streak snapped by the Angels in the sixth, collected his fourth victory in five decisions. He struck out six, boosting his American League-leading total to 48, but walked seven.

Dwight Evans, breaking out of an 0-11 and 2-32 slump, had three hits while Bill Buckner, Rich Gedman and Armas had two apiece as the Red Sox posted their fifth victory in the last six starts. Califfornia starter Jim Slaton lost for the first time in four decisions.

Oakland 6
Toronto 4

TORONTO (AP) — Mike Davis and Donnie Hill hit back-to-back home runs in the eighth inning and Steve McCatty picked up his first win in his last 11 starts as the Oakland A's defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 6-4 Wednesday night.

Oakland was protecting a 4-3 lead when Davis and Hill homered off Toronto starter Doyle Alexander, who dropped to 4-1 after losing for only the second time in 15 decisions. Davis' homer was his league-leading 10th while Hill's was his second.

The victory, only the third for Oakland in 13 games, made McCatty, 2-1, a victorious starter for the first time since last July 19. In his second start of the season, McCatty lasted until he gave up two hits to open the sixth inning. Bill Krueger pitched a third of an inning, Keith Atherton went 1 2-3 innings and Jay Howell handled the final two in relief.

Detroit 4
Texas 1

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Dan Petry scattered eight hits over 8⅔ innings and designated hitter Alex Sanchez hit two home runs to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 4-1 victory over the Rangers Wednesday night.

Petry, 5-2, struck out four and walked one in carrying a shutout into the ninth. After Texas scored a run on Bobby Jones' two-out double and a single by Don Slaugh

Minnesota 8
New York 6

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Gary Gaetti drove in five runs with a grand slam home run and a sacrifice fly and Kent Hrbek drove in three with a homer and two doubles Wednesday night as the Minnesota Twins defeated the New York Yankees 8-6.

The Yankees announced before the game that they were playing under protest because they claimed the Metrodome is unsuitable for major league baseball. The Yankees misplayed several fly balls in their 8-6 loss Tuesday night, contending that the Metrodome's lighting was at fault.

Kansas City 9
Baltimore 8

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Lynn Jones drove in four runs Wednesday night and the Kansas City Royals, despite issuing a near-record six straight walks, snapped a five-game losing streak by holding on for a 9-8 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Jones, hitless in 21 at bats, unloaded a three-run double off Scott McGregor, 1-3, in the second inning. Frank White's solo home run gave the Royals a run in the first.

Kansas City starter Danny Jackson began the fourth inning by striking out Eddie Murray, then walked Gary Roenicke, Fred Lynn, Mike Young, Fritz Connally, and Rick Dempsey. Twenty of Jackson's last 23 pitches were balls.

Bruins' comeback falls a little short

Prep baseball

By LARRY HOVEY

TWIN FALLS — It went down to a bases-loaded, two-out situation before the Twin Falls Bruins dropped a 7-6 decision to Meridian Wednesday afternoon.

The Bruins, down by as much as 5-0 in the early going as Meridian staged a strong hitting performance, cut it down to 7-6 when Rob Ellis scored on a bases-loaded walk. But Rob Friesen, Meridian's third pitcher of the last two innings, then posted a strike out to end it.

"We started out halfway slow again, just like we did against Highland last weekend," said Coach Bill Ingram. "It seems like we go out feeling a little intimidated but these guys don't have anything to feel intimidated about because they're a pretty good team."

"In the first couple of innings we didn't do much to stay close. They got the five runs on us and we just kept making mistakes and playing timidly. We had the two base runners picked off, things like that that kill you quick when you're playing a good team like Meridian."

The difference in the teams was found in the three-four batting spots — the same spots that had lined up five professional scouts in the stands.

The top reason for that professional attention was pitcher Shon Ashley, who responded with a three-for-three day at the plate, four runs scored and a pair of stolen bases.

"He's going to get some big bucks," predicted CSI Coach Jim Walker who met him on the recruiting trail.

The other was Friesen, who opened at third base, then moved to centerfield — and finally the mound. He was three-for-four with four RBIs, a stolen base and, of course, the save.

"You're not going to see many teams with two players like that," said Ingram. "About any other team would feel lucky to have one."

Meridian got after starter Kirk Slater early when Brad Brooks line a pitch down the line for a single. After a bunt, Ashley doubled to put runners at second and third Friesen then drilled a two-run single.

NL: Padres throttle Bucs; stay on top

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The pitcher that San Diego Padres' catcher Terry Kennedy hates to face most is Pittsburgh left-hander Larry McWilliams, but that didn't seem to matter Wednesday night.

Kennedy was 1-for-17 with 11 strikeouts against McWilliams when he lashed a bases-loaded double to drive in three runs and help the Padres defeat the Pirates 12-2.

"You have to give Kennedy credit for doing what he did off him because he's a good pitcher," said Pirate manager Chuck Tanner. "He had his best stuff tonight and they hit it."

Hawkins, 6-0, scattered nine hits over eight innings while walking none and striking out three.

The win, coupled with Houston's loss to Montreal, gave the Padres at least a one-game lead in the National League West. Los Angeles, a half-game behind at the start of the day, was still in action against St. Louis at press time.

Chicago 1
San Francisco 0

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rick Sutcliffe pitched a six-hitter Wednesday night and Ryne Sandberg hit a home run, one of just two hits off San Francisco's Mike Krukow, to give the Chicago Cubs a 1-0 victory over the Giants.

Sutcliffe, 4-3, struck out 12 batters in firing his second shutout of the season and the fifth since he joined the Cubs less than a year ago.

Cincinnati 8
Philadelphia 2

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dave Van Gorder's first major league homer, a three-run shot in the sixth inning Wednesday night, triggered the Cincinnati Reds to an 8-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

With two out in the sixth, the Reds scored four runs off loser John Denny, 1-3, to snap a 2-2 tie.

New York 4
Atlanta 0

NEW YORK (AP) — Keith Hernandez hit a two-run homer in the first inning Wednesday night, leading right-hander Ed Lynch to his first career shoutout and the New York Mets to a 4-0 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Lynch, 2-1, who entered the season with only one complete game in his four years with the Mets, had his second straight nine-inning outing, blanking the Braves on five hits, two by Ken Oberkfell. Lynch walked one and struck out one.

Montreal 1
Houston 0

MONTREAL (AP) — Joe Hesketh struck out a career-high 12 batters Wednesday night and held Houston to four hits before Jeff Reardon came on to collect his major league-leading eighth save as the Montreal Expos blanked the Astros 1-0.

Herm Winningham's bases-loaded walk off Nolan Ryan in the second inning accounted for the only run of the game.

Hesketh, 4-1, who left after Bill Doran doubled with two outs in the eighth inning, struck out the side in both the first and fifth innings.

Boutin signs first recruit

POCATELLO — New Idaho State University basketball coach Jim Boutin has signed his first recruit since taking the job a month ago.

The signee is Toros Yetenkian, a 6-foot-8 transfer from Glendale (Calif.) Community College. Yetenkian, a Glendale native, averaged 15 points and 10.8 rebounds in his sophomore season and will be used as a shooting forward, according to Boutin.

"He's a good offensive threat from the outside," said Boutin. "He gives us good outside shooting from a big player. He bangs the boards well for a kid with a slight build, and he can rebound in traffic."

Bowladrome tennis sign-ups

TWIN FALLS — Entries are now open for the Idaho First National Bank-Bowladrome Tennis Tournament, which will be held here Saturday, May 18, and Sunday, May 19.

There will be competition in men's singles, men's doubles, women's singles, women's doubles and mixed doubles and men's 35's. There will be A, B and C divisions in men's and women's singles and men's and women's doubles and A and B divisions in mixed doubles. Assignment to those divisions will be determined by United States Tennis Association rating: A for 4.0, B for 3.5 and C 3.0 or below.

Matches will be played at the Frontier Field courts and at other sites around Twin Falls.

There is a $3 entry fee for singles, $5 for doubles, with trophies going to event winners.

Entry forms are available at the Blue Lakes Blvd. office of the Idaho First National Bank, the Bowladrome, Donnelley Sports and Newton's. Information can be obtained by phoning 733-9469 or 734-7645.

AAU-USA state wrestling set

MORELAND — The AAU/USA Junior Olympic State Association Wrestling Tournament will be held at Snake River Junior High here on Saturday, May 18.

The tournament will qualify winners for the Region XII tournament, which will be held in the Bronco Gymnasium at Boise State University next month.

The tournament will begin at 10:30 a.m., and there is a $7 registration fee. Further information can be obtained by phoning Don Beaudoin at 362-5662 or Portia Jayo at 322-8159.

Burgoyn wins in Idaho Falls

TWIN FALLS — Dennis Burgoyn of Twin Falls took first place in a motocross race in Idaho Falls last week.

Burgoyn took first in the ATC division, while Ed Drexler of Twin Falls finished third in the 250 expert class and Gary Wise was fourth in the 125 intermediate class. Steve Quale was a sixth-place finisher in the 250 expert class.

Ray Hunt horse clinic slated

BLISS — The annual Ray Hunt colt breaking and horsemanship clinic will be held at the Bliss Rodeo Arena May 25-29.

Classes will be available for all age groups.

Further information can be obtained by phoning Morris Nielson at 934-5239.

Irwin takes Colorado tourney

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls bowler John Irwin recently won first-place honors at the Fort Collins, Colo., Open bowling tournament.

Irwin defeated Matt Kerns of Denver 212-199 in the final of the match-play format tourney.

BOSTON — Larry Bird failed to deliver down the stretch of his two previous games but said he wasn't in a slump. After scoring career-playoff-high 43 points Wednesday night, he's certainly not in a slump now.

Bird got 17 of those points in the fourth quarter and added 13 rebounds for the game to spark the Boston Celtics to a 120-123 victory over the Detroit Pistons and a 3-2 lead in their National Basketball Association series.

Boston can wrap up the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal Friday night in Detroit. The Pistons are trying to become the sixth NBA team to win a seven-game series after losing the first two contests.

"I felt good about the games in Detroit," said Bird. "A couple of shots I took looked like they were going in and dropped out. The same thing could have happened today.

"You always hear about a slump. I don't think I was in a slump. I think I took shots and I just missed them.

"In Detroit the plays were designed to go to me, and I missed the shots. Tonight they were designed to go to me, and I hit them."

Going into the game, Bird had scored just two points each in four of his previous five quarters. He also had made just one of six shots in the final period of Sunday's fourth game loss. But he had at least six points in each quarter Wednesday night before exploding in the fourth quarter.

"The guys who played (Bird) have to play harder," said Detroit Coach Chuck Daly. "They've got to understand who they are playing. They can't play 80 percent. They've got to play 100 percent."

Boston Coach K.C. Jones said that in the fourth period, Boston did the same things in trying to get the ball to Bird as it did in the first three periods, but "did a better job of executing."

Detroit led only twice but kept the game close all the way with the help of 30 points by substitute Vinnie Johnson.

Consecutive jumpers by Bird and Dennis Johnson, who had 30 points, put Boston ahead 122-112, its biggest lead of the game, with 1:46 to play. Those were the Celtics last field goals of the game.

Baskets by Vinnie Johnson and Kelly Tripucka cut the lead to 122-116 with 1:00 remaining.

After Bird sank two free throws, Tripucka converted a three-point play to cut Boston's lead to 122-120 with 20 seconds to go. But two free throws by Robert Parish with 11 seconds left boosted the lead to seven points.

John Long's jumper with three seconds to go gave the Pistons thier final basket and Danny Ainge closed the scoring for Boston with two foul shots with two seconds remaining.

The Celtics hit 37 of 39 free throws.

Boston can wrap up the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal Friday night in Detroit. The Pistons, meanwhile, will be trying to become the sixth NBA team to win a seven-game series after losing the first two [illegible].

The Celtics led 97-92 early in the fourth period when Bird, who scored 17 points in the period, scored the next nine points to put Boston in front 106-98. Consecutive driving layups by Bird made the score 116-108.

Jarbidge elk herd idea stunted by opponents

By LARRY HOVEY
and BOB FREUND
Times-News writers

ELKO, Nev. — Dead-aborning, a plan to establish an elk herd in the Jarbidge Mountains along the Nevada-Idaho border has been at least postponed indefinitely and maybe cancelled due to economic considerations and the age-old conflict with civilization.

The Nevada Department of Wildlife officially withdrew consideration of the plan when a "depredation bill" emerged in the Nevada Legislature. Under that proposed legislation, the department would have been financially responsible for fulfilling wildlife-caused claims filed against it by Nevada residents.

Heading the battle against re-introducing the species to its historic range were landowners adjacent to proposed release sites and Idaho livestock interests, who are concerned that any movement could bring the elk into their haystacks and pastures during hard winters.

Having a statewide elk population of 700 to 800, Nevada managers saw the transplant as a chance to increase Nevada's elk herd by 25 percent, increase hunting opportunity for its sportsmen in northern Nevada, enhance its revenues through license and tag sales and restore the species to levels that existed before white men arrived in the area.

"We have only four (elk) populations in the state . . . and only hunt three of them," said Mike Wickham of Elko, Nev., regional game manager. "We were looking forward to having another."

The Nevada department "tried to involve everyone affected" in the plan from its inception, Wickham said.

This included a history of elk in the area from sightings verified in the late 1800s to isolated cases of elk being seen along the northern tier of the state for the past 20 years.

Spurring hopes for the department was a U.S. Forest Service report that indicated there was "some excellent elk range there and, within the Jarbidge wilderness, some 40,000 acres that have not been grazed for over 20 years."

Because it expected some landowner resistance, Nevada established some severe management guidelines to keep the herd in the 250-300 level.

This included everything from fencing-mending, haystack paneling and trapping and removal of depredating animals to one that said "should the elk prove to be unmanageable and incompatible, a program of elk elimination would be initiated" by the department personnel. In other words, conservation officers would shoot the herd into extinction.

The department study further found the area appeared "suitable winter range even in the last three or four years when we've had different snow accumulation. Some of the originally described wintering areas were virtually snow free," Wickham said. "There is some private land around the Jarbidge (area) and there is potential for animals to go to that private land in the winter. But we viewed the potential as low."

To bolster its position, Nevada called in Craig Kvale, a Jerome-based wildlife officer with the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

After an inspection trip through the area, Kvale termed the area "good elk habitat, summer and winter range . . . considerably better than the Idaho side."

Kvale agreed there was "potential" for the Nevada herd moving into Idaho under harsh winter conditions but noted "their best winter range is on the south side of the planting site" and it would be more attractive than anything the elk might find to the north on the Idaho side.

Throughout the discussion, landowners in Nevada and Idaho's 71 Livestock Association protested the elk translocation as a menance to their operations.

Randall Brewer, 71 Association president, said "I think we are all sportsmen to some extent. We like to see wildlife. The last thing from our consideration is not to have any wildlife and (at times) I think the ranchers enjoy them more than the sportsmen.

"One thing that bothered us a little on this: they said if one (landowner) opposed it, it would be dropped," he continued. "Everybody was opposed to it but we had to hire a lawyer to convince them that we were opposed."

Elk declining unit changes

Survey shows little movement

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

FAIRFIELD — A telemetry survey of Unit 44 elk indicates that the animals are declining the Idaho Department of Fish and Game's invitation to move into Unit 43.

Craig Kvale, Region 4 wildlife manager, said he was able to locate 11 elk that were equipped with radio collars two years ago and the results were a little disappointing.

"They've moved off the feed sites but they're still in the lower drainages on the Unit 44 side from Sheep Point and Phillips Creek to Elk Creek areas," he said. "So for the second year we again we see no movement back Unit 43."

Kvale had put together some later hunting dates and antierless permit increases together in an effort to have the harassment by hunters push the elk back into the Boise River South Fork side of the divide.

The intent was to lessen the depredation of elk on private lands and haystacks and reduce the cost of feeding some 500 to 600 animals on the Camas Prairie during the winter. If a sizeable percentage could be pushed into Unit 43, the extra elk could more easily be accommodated at the five permanent feeding sites on the South Fork which is virtually all public land.

"Even with those things (later hunting and more hunters) they appear to straddle the ridges and stay on the 44 side and put with with the hunting pressure," Kvale said. "With the first snow they come right back into the Camas area."

Kvale said there was a possibility "we may have to increase the number of permits again" to effect the movement.

In a brighter note, Kvale said he was pleased that the telemetry survey has given no indication of any interplay with the "desert herd" that roams the Bennett Ridge and the south Soldier Mountain herd.

The desert herd sprang up in the early 1960s when about 40 elk were moved off Warm Springs wintering area near Ketchum and moved to the backwaters to winter on the willows and other forage available there. It was suspected that at the first sign of spring, the elk would return to traditional summer range.

However, the elk, historically a plains animal before civilization forced it to high elevations, like the sagebrushed-desert and stayed there, growing to about 300 head. The herd has increased hunting opportunity for sportsmen but also has been a depredation factor on private lands from north of Shoshone into the north King Hill area.

Kvale said it is imperative to keep the herd numbers trimmed to a manageable amount. He feels this can be done through manipulation of hunting dates and permit numbers provided the herd's growth isn't subject to outside influences. The lack of evidence of interplay with the nearest elk population (south Soldier herd) indicates that management can remain at current levels.

U.S. Fish and Wildlife employees secure a tranquilized caribou for transport to a nearby corral after being transplanted

Columbia fishing plan fought by IFG

BOISE (AP) — Criticizing the new plan for a 23-day fall Indian gill-net season in the Columbia River as the product of closed-door negotiations, the Idaho Fish and Game Department will ask to intervene in a federal court challenge to the agreement within the next week.

Director Jerry Conley said Wednesday negotiations toward the proposed agreement, which still must be approved by a federal judge, pointedly excluded Idaho, which has a legitimate interest in the downstream catch of fall chinook salmon as they make their way back to spawning waters in the state.

He labeled the pact announced Tuesday as "a secret agreement on Columbia River fisheries."

Conley disputed claims by officials in the negotiations, which involved Washington, Oregon and the four Columbia River Basin Indian tribes, that Idaho was notified of the public meeting on the plan but declined to attend. He said even if there was a public meeting, the agreement itself was worked out in secret.

The state has been waging a running battle with downstream fishing interests over allocation of the inland-bound salmon and steelhead on the Columbia system, contending that liberalized fishing regulations are denying Idaho its fair share of the resource.

When an agreement to permit an Indian ceremonial harvest of 3,400 spring chinook was announced, the state lost its bid to obtain a court order blocking it.

But while the court rejected Idaho's claim that the harvest would significantly reduce the number of chinook for spawning, Conley said he believed that had either Oregon or Washington officials sided with Idaho, the ruling would have gone the other way.

Agreeing with Conley was Les Clark of Chinook, Wash., president of the Northwest Gill-Netters Association.

Caribou carted to Kenai

High-technology roundup replaces long-lost herd in Alaska

By BRUCE BARTLEY
The Associated Press

LAKE LOUISE, Alaska — After a high-technology roundup and fly-in, biologists have transplanted caribou to Alaska's Kenai Peninsula, where the native herd was destroyed 50 years ago by market hunters.

Twenty eight caribou from south-central Alaska were transplanted to the peninsula this spring. Biologists believe the habitat on the peninsula southeast of Anchorage could support a population of 2,500 animals.

The caribou roundup near Lake Louise was a display of high-technology management in a relatively untouched wilderness setting.

"Caribou cowboys" built a temporary corral of pipe, plywood, netting and burlap on a frozen lake.

Two helicopters and two spotter planes roamed the nearby black-spruce forests looking for likely transplant candidates.

Biologists in the helicopters shot the animals with tranquilizer darts.

Once an animal went down from the tranquilizer, the helicopter returned, dropping off a two-man team to hobble the dazed but still conscious caribou, blindfold them and place them in a bag designed to hold the animals' heads erect.

The animals then were picked up by a helicopter and flown to the corral.

The animals' antlers were sawed off to prevent the caribou from injuring each other or their handlers. Unlike most members of the deer family, female caribou have antlers, although they generally are smaller than the males.

While the high-technology enabled the roundup to go perfectly, the inherent barbarracy of the modern world took its toll.

The original plan was to handle the animals as little as possible. After their capture, they were to be mildly sedated and loaded into a pod slung beneath a giant military helicopter designed to haul troops. After a two-hour flight, they were to be released on a high bench between the Skilak and Tustamena lakes.

But at the last minute, after nearly half the animals had been captured, the Department of the Army in Washington, D.C., decided that would be an inappropriate use of the Alaska National Guard aircraft.

So biologists found a live stock truck to haul the caribou nearly 300 miles. Then they were flown by small helicopters to the pens and Terry Spraker, a veterinarian from Colorado State University and a veteran of numerous big game transplants, warned that mortality rates would multiply each time the animals were handled. Sixteen of the 44 animals died during the transfer.

Biologists remained optimistic that the remaining 22 cows and six bulls would be a viable basis for a healthy herd.

"It is (enough) if a wolf pack doesn't find them fairly quickly," said Dan Timm, regional director of operations for the Alaska Department of Fish & Game. He said the few wolves in the area generally are widely dispersed.

Biologists believe all 22 cows were carrying calves.

Under normal attrition, it would be expected that 25 percent of the calves would survive until fall. Thereafter, the herd is expected to grow about 25 percent a year.

Timm said no firm population figure has been set for when the herd could be hunted.

The process of restocking the peninsula with caribou actually began 20 years ago when two transplants were made. As a result, a herd of about 50-80 animals roams the lowland area near the city of Kenai and another 350 can be found in the Kenai Mountains near Hope.

Early fishing at Magic Reservoir has plentitude, not size

Swen

Frau and I sampled the early fishing at Magic Reservoir last Monday.

We caught no monster fish, but in one evening of fishing this 'ol boy hooked, netted and released 18 fish of from 14 to 18 inches.

My surface flies produced not one fish, so with a piece of leaded line and fishing right on the bottom in about 10 feet of water, my twitching method of bottom fishing gained the respect of any fish in the area.

We were fishing in the Lava Creek area, and found that the wind-aided cast was our best producer. When it became too calm, the fishing just came to a halt. I assume it was the ripple on the surface that sent them into a feeding frenzy.

Very few fish were rising to a surface lure. The upper end of Lava Creek had thousands of small fish, so I assume the fish were feeding on these small fish.

The monster fish I have reported being caught in Magic Reservoir are not the special strains that were planted in this reservoir. This scribe helped dye some of these fish that are special long-life strains of rainbow, and this was three years ago.

With a growth rate of a pound a year, which is exceptional, the new strains will probably be in the 1½-to-2 pound class. The 10-, 7½-pounders, etc., are probably the good old "Magic" blend.

Only an expert, with a black light, can now tell the different strains that were dyed with different colors and will show up in the eye of the fish.

West Magic now has a new complex that is called West Shore. It has come up with a much-needed facility, a dump station. The cost for dumping is a reasonable $2, and the plan is for overnighters to be able to camp for another reasonable $5 per night. This will include power, water and sanitary facilities.

If any of you have ever had to haul home a week's collection of sewage, you can realize just what this facility will mean.

In the past, the Bureau of Land Management has reported that some of the trailers and motor homes have dumped in the sagebrush around West Magic, making for a dangerous situation.

The new facility consists of a bar and cafe and will handle some groceries. And for the first time, you will be able to purchase your fishing license at Magic.

They are now open, but the official opening will come near the middle of May.

Plans are under way to include a small motel in the same complex.

Perch plantings have been made in Milner Reservoir.

I assume this will also make Murtaugh Lake a good perch fishery.

In years past, Murtaugh Lake held some large perch and because the canal system will hold water year round the perch will thrive. Murtaugh held the state record a few years back for the largest perch. This is good news for perch fishermen.

Murtaugh Lake has been good yellow cat-fishing during the early spring, with the most being caught in the evening hours.

I have a request of my shell-loading friends.

All of us have had the experience of going to a quiet camping area, or even the local park, and find the area to be a noise factory. A group of youngsters have speakers that are wired up to their tape decks, and the huge speakers are then placed on top of the car for the unwilling audience to hear a selection of whang-bang, baby-baby music.

My request of the shell loaders is this: Is there a shotgun load that can be designed specifically to blow the heck out of these car-top mounted speakers?

Depredation takes a major toll

Larry Hovey

D. Michael Curran, a rancher along the Dearborn River in Montana, has presented the Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks with bills totaling $168,915 to cover damages to pasture and forage, alfalfa and fences by elk, deer and antelope.

According to Curran, the forage eaten by big game is the "biggest charity" in Montana and he plans to cut his cow herds by about 20 percent because of game damage and drought.

His total invoice is the sum of $23,040 for pasturing 320 elk at $12 a month; $38,400 for 800 deer at $6 a month; $12,000 for pasturing 400 antelope at $5 a month; $28,350 for 315 tons of alfalfa hay, and $7,125 for fixing fences damaged by elk.

In a Colorado last spring, another landowner, Jim Suckla filed a $60,000 winter damage bill with the Colorado Wildlife Commission for depredation on pasture and alfalfa and taking feed away from his cattle.

He was finally awarded $12,000, which was part of a record $879,612 Colorado paid out in damage claims, in fiscal 1983-84. That figure does not include any feeding, big-game proofing and other costs that Colorado paid for as depredation deterrent.

Suckla's claim also led the Colorado commission to establish a 24-day special permit season in which about 250 cow elk were taken by hunters to ease the depredation.

On the basis of revenue-producing potential, Colorado estimates each elk in the state is worth $1,200. Therefore, it believes it killed $300,000 worth of cow elk because of the $12,000 depredation lien.

In Nevada, a chance to increase the herd's total population by 25 to 30 percent has been canceled because landowners almost rainrodded a bill through its livestock-oriented Legislature that would have forced the resource-poor Nevada Wildlife Commission to settle up on any and all depredation bills.

Nevada, which currently has 700 to 800 elk and three huntable populations, saw a chance to use some of the Jarbidge Mountains as a transplant site to establish "250 to 300" which would, in the near future, provide perhaps a 50-permit hunt for northern Nevada sportsmen.

While the Nevada commission promised to control the herd numbers with everything up to "department shooting" and reasoned the chance of the elk having to winter on private land as "low potential," the threat to its small budget caused it to withdraw the transplanting idea totally.

All of the above indicates that Idaho in general and Region 4 (Magic Valley) in particular are not alone in the continuing battle of wildlife and civilization.

Overall, the political and economic overtones in the western states (with legislatures largely dominated by farmer-rancher-landowners) favor the livestock interests.

This major confrontation, crystalized by three severe winters in the past four, has been predictable for the past several years with all western wildlife management professing a goal of building big game herds. At the same time, landowners-livestockmen are receiving less for their production than ever before (by comparison).

Idaho currently is formulating its new "five-year plans" for the various hunted species in the state and, by and large, it would appear the new plans will call for at least a status quo on populations (except in isolated and local instances). They hardly can expect to continue the increases called for and accomplished in previous plans because of the substantial population growths they have entailed.

While Idaho has undertaken a special deer and elk tag fee to underwrite winter feeding of those species, the money accrued ($350,000 to $400,000) barely covers the "high profile" depredation. Deer and elk in haystacks during the winter have been a routine sight in Region 4. However, the depredation factor goes much farther than deer and elk.

Broad legislation that could cover all wildlife, from migratory birds to beaver, pheasants, rabbits, rock chucks, etc., would quickly put Idaho's financial base in the same jeopardized condition the 300-head Jarbidge elk herd Nevada foresaw.

And the beat goes on.

Letter

Shouldering the costs

In reference to Larry Hovey's article which appeared in The Times-News on April 25, 1985, concerning depredation costs.

Holy "cow", Larry, you certainly are talking "big 'bucks'." It is a lot of "bull" that $1,000 would be totally out of the question for depredation costs. Based on the report by the Fish and Game Department that $400,000 was received from the $1.50 that was attached to each deer and elk tag sold for the purpose of emergency feeding programs, the $3,000 per tag would raise $300,000.00. That's not a realistic amount by any stretch of the imagination.

There does not seem to be any easy answer to the problem of depredation costs. One proposal under consideration by the Fish and Game Department is to have depredation hunts in the animals' winter ranges. I cannot totally accept this. I just don't feel easy about having these animals shot around hay stacks and their winter feeding areas. The thought of reducing herds that sportsmen have helped build in this way, just doesn't seem totally acceptable.

I wonder why, if funds were provided, if feed lots could be provided to keep the animals off private lands. Feeding just to be feeding is not well accepted by the Fish and Game Department, but in order to satisfy the hunting pressure, big herds are a necessity.

In 1982-83, Wyoming spent $655,833 on winter feeding or $31.70 per animal for feed. These same animals brought $26,000,000 revenue into the State of Wyoming through resident and non-resident hunters fees. Sounds like a real good trade to me.

Utah increased their fees an additional $2.50. This fee is designated for depredation costs. Why can't we?

We are experiencing a migration change in the area north of the Snake River. Because of this, land owners are being besieged by herds of elk and deer that eat their hay and mutilate their fields. They cannot be expected to foot the bill for these animals.

The Fish and Game Department has the responsibilty to protect and perpetuate these herds by law, the sportsman a moral responsibility.

I hope the sportsmen of Idaho will make their wishes known. It's too big an issue to ignore and maybe we'd "better afford it."

RAY CLAYTON

way, the proposal picked up steam. It was overwhelmingly well-received by northern Nevada hunters.

With both sides appearing more and more adamant, the issue reached the point where a public hearing on a depredation bill was set by the Nevada public lands committee. The landowners were determined to have the bill while some sportsmen from the Elko area planned to testify in support of the translocation.

But before the hearing date, William Molini, director of the Nevada department, capitulated.

In part Molini wrote to the chairman of the committee considering the depredation compensation bill:

"Although we consider the Jarbidge Mountains to contain a substantial amount of suitable elk habitat, we have been unable to achieve the acceptance of the proposal by those parties who are subjected to potential impact from this proposal. Namely, the ranchers whose private lands are in the vicinity of the proposed elk release site.

"It is in the best long-term interest of the custodial managers of the state's wildlife to maintain positive cooperative working relationships with the private landowners. The relationship between the department and the livestock industry has generally been good in the recent past and we believe still improving.

"In consequence of these circumstances and the strong opposition of the locally affected livestock men, a release of elk into the Jarbidge Mountains would likely be counterproductive to furthermore of our existing wild management program.

"While it remains our long-term goal to re-establish elk in the Jarbidge Mountains, we will withdraw consideration of this proposal until, and if, the locally affected livestock interests can concur with such an effort."

The economic aspect was underlined when Wickham noted "we certainly don't have the wildlife resources that Idaho has and consequently we don't have the revenues to allow winter feeding." He noted if Nevada had the license and tag drawing capabilities that 3,000 to 4,000 elk might accrue, "then maybe the revenues would merit feeding. But not with the small number."

Kimberly man recalls VE Day from Soviet side

By FLYNN McROBERTS
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — Most of the recountings of the Allied move into Germany, during this 40th anniversary of the Third Reich's fall, have one common element: The veterans reminiscing the event advanced from the west.

Wladimir Miszczenko saw that advance from a different angle.

As a tank crew member in the Soviet Army, he came up through the Nazis' crumbling eastern strongholds and into the heart of Hitler's "empire."

Now living south of Kimberly, Miszczenko came to the United States in 1956 with his family, including his son, Walter, a Twin Falls High School graduate in 1969 and now a history professor at Boise State University.

Miszczenko experienced firsthand the bloody street fighting throughout the last weeks of the war before Germany's unconditional surrender May 8, 1945. With the Germans fighting desperately fierce, especially in the Battle of Berlin's last days, he says Soviet leaders ordered an intense attack on the Nazi capital.

"The decision had been made by command that Berlin would be taken house by house, and block by block," he recalls, speaking in a thick Russian accent. "We crossed the Oder River in April and joined up with our (Soviet) forces northwest of Potsdam. With this, we had completed the encirclement of Berlin in the latter half of April."

For Miszczenko and his comrades, news of an allied link was tempered with the reality of an unfinished battle.

"While we were closing in, news reched us that our forces had met American troops on the Elbe (River) at Torgau (now in East Germany). But the war wasn't over yet — the Battle of Berlin was ahead of us," he says. "From then on the fighting became fierce because we were only four kilometers from the Reichchancellery (Hitler's Berlin headquarters)."

At that point, Hitler's troops resorted to all forms of guerrilla warfare in their last-ditch efforts.

"We received gunfire from German soldiers hiding in attics, cellars, sewer manholes and back yards," Miszczenko says of the Germans' tactics. "On many occasions, Germans hiding in sewer manholes would let our men pass and then open fire from behind."

When signs of surrender began to show, the Nazis turned on their own, he says.

"White flags began to appear from the windows. German soldiers would shoot at those flags. It is impossible to describe all of the fighting that took place in our section, since both sides fought for every house and every block," Miszczenko says, the battle's ferocity echoing in his voice. "There was no forgiveness on either side."

After the death of "der Fuhrer," he recalls, the German fire soon began to flicker out.

"On May 1, 1945, news reached us: Hitler had committed suicide. But the battle continued. The next day we heard that some of our troops had planted the Red Flag over the Reichstag. Then, from windows, sewer holes, doors and roofs, more and more white flags began to appear — like mushrooms."

Soon both German soldiers and civilians began to appear.

"Small groups of German prisoners were marching in the streets. There were very few civilians on the streets at first," he recalls. "The ones that did appear showed fear on their faces. Just like we did when the Germans were in our city in 1941."

"On May 3, more civilians appeared on the streets," he continues. "They told us they were hungry and thirsty and showed us where people were buried in the ruins; some were still alive. German soldiers were ordered to dig them out."

"We shared our food with the civilians and German soldiers — especially with the children."

Anniversaries

Arnold and Donna Claiborne

The Claibornes

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Claiborne, Twin Falls, will be honored at an open house Saturday in observance of their 50th wedding anniversary.

Friends and relatives are invited to call from 2 to 5 p.m. at the LDS Church on Elizabeth Boulevard, Twin Falls.

Claiborne and Donna Swainston were married May 16, 1935, in Jerome. They farmed in several places in the Magic Valley before coming to Twin Falls in 1975.

The open house will be hosted by their six children, Irene Babbit, Bellevue, Wash.; Joyce Stringer, Twin Falls; Virginia Walker, Boise; Jean Harper, Las Vegas; Lee Claiborne and David Claiborne, both Twin Falls. The couple has 19 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

The Van Sickels

GLENNS FERRY — Harold G. and Doris O. Van Sickel celebrated their golden wedding anniversary May 7 at their home.

They were married May 7, 1935, in Memphis, Mo., and lived in Missouri, New Mexico and Dietrich before moving to Glenns Ferry area in 1949. They farmed in Pasadena Valley, south of King Hill, for many years before moving into Glenns Ferry.

The couple has one son, James Van Sickel, Pocatello, and three granddaughters.

Diet licensing being sought

By CAROLE SUGARMAN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Almost anyone can get "snookered," says Dr. John Renner.

But for some reason, the public is better at spotting a phony car dealer than it is at recognizing nutritional nonsense from an unqualified practitioner, says Renner, a Kansas City physician who has been studying nutrition fraud.

Controversy over the value of various nutritional programs is nothing new. Yet some observers say that the situation is only getting worse as awareness of the connection between diet and health and the confusing array of information on how to connect the two increases.

From magical diets to miracle food and megadose vitamin cures for cancer or diabetes, advice is continuously dispensed to a vulnerable public by those claiming to be nutrition experts.

What is new about this phenomenon is that in practically every state across the nation, dietitians and nutritionists with degrees from accredited universities are fighting back.

They want to license their profession; they want the scope of their jobs legally defined; and they want to make it illegal for individuals to offer nutrition advice without proper credentials.

Of course, formal credentials do not guarantee competence. On the other hand, the fact that a person lacks such credentials is not necessarily an indication that the services or programs he offers are inadequate.

However, Renner, director of the Sisters of St. Mary's Hospital Family Residency Program and a patient-education advocate who teaches nutrition to doctors, believes that licensing would give consumers a better idea of what they're getting if the entry in the yellow pages were followed by a line that said, "licensed dietitian."

A bill awaits the governor's signature in Maryland, while dietetic associations in Virginia and the District of Columbia are in the beginning stages of drafting such bills.

Puerto Rico and Oklahoma have mandatory licensing laws. Dietitians in four other states are working on voluntary licensure, while Georgia and Texas already have passed such bills. North Dakota has mandatory licensure for dietitians and voluntary licensure for nutritionists.

Four states — California, Louisiana, Alabama and Montana — have entitlement, which spells out certain educational requirements that someone must have to use the title "dietitian" (but does not define scope of practice as licensure does), while five others are working for entitlement.

You know, basically you should improve speech

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: Basically, this letter is about people who basically overuse a particular word, or groups of words. Basically, the worst offenders are people who say "you know" four and five times in one sentence — basically speaking, you know.

You know how overworked those basic words can seem after basically a short period of time. You know, I find such repetitions basically nauseating, really.

Based on my aversion, you know, I'm considering taking drastic action to basically draw attention to this basic speech fault by taping the offenders' mouths shut, you know.

I'm basically a fan of yours, you know, so would you see if there are many others out there who, you know, have basically the same reaction?

— GAIL H., SHOREWOOD

DEAR GAIL: You know basically I can understand your irritation because I do know that such sloppy speech habits are formed by people with basically limited vocabularies.

But don't go away; here's a companion piece to your letter from Scottsdale, Ariz.:

DEAR ABBY: One of the most annoying habits I find among people, especially teen-agers and young adults, is ending every sentence with "OK?".

The sentence can be a simple statement, such as, "I went to the store," but there's that superfluous "OK?" tacked onto it as if it were a question.

The "OK" habit is a sign of insecurity, and is used by people who need constant approval for everything they say.

It makes one wonder how people can go through school with such an irritating habit without having it corrected by teachers or associates.

— TIRED OF "OK" IN ARIZONA

DEAR ABBY: What can I do about an old high school classmate who has been after me to resume our friendship after 18 years? We no longer have anything in common, and to make matters worse, she has just given birth to her first baby! (My children are in their teens.)

She is eager for me to see her baby, and I dread it. I certainly don't intend to buy a baby gift for someone that I have no intention of seeing again.

I can't stall her any longer. What should I tell her that won't crush her?

— TOO OLD FOR BABY TALK

DEAR TOO OLD: You certainly can't tell her the brutal truth — that you have nothing in common and don't care to see her baby.

You're exerting far more energy ducking her and feeling guilty than it would take to buy her a little gift and see her baby. Sometimes the easiest way "around" something is right through it.

CONFIDENTIAL TO F.L. IN ALASKA: One's character is made up of what he (or she) does when nobody is looking.

Civil court

The following civil cases were filed this past week in Fifth District Court in Twin Falls:

Twin Falls Bank and Trust Co. vs. Diane J. Hall and Chester D. Hall. The plaintiff seeks to recover money due and owing on a promissory note in the amount of $29,516 plus interest, cost of the suit and attorney's fees.

Anderson Lumber Co., a Utah Co. vs. John Altman dba Snake River Realty. The plaintiff seeks to recover money for goods and services rendered in the amount of $18,303 plus interest, cost of the suit and attorney's fees.

Stanley Nunes and Isabel Nunes vs. Jose Cabral and Marla B. Cabral. The plaintiff requests the court issue a decree of dissolution on a partnership agreement, that the property be applied first to the payment of partnership debts, that an order to show cause restrain the defendants from selling any property, cost of the suit and attorney's fees.

Ronnie R. Lemke and Alyse Lemke and Otto Lemke and Alice Lemke vs. Richard H. Erdmann and Florence V. Erdmann; Norma J. Aslett; Geoffrey K. McIntosh and J. Rand Howell; Idaho Bank and Trust Co., a corp., and Paul Taber. The plaintiff alleges property was sold to the defendants, including a liquor license and equipment. The plaintiff alleges the defendants are in default of the contract and asks for a judgment that by reason of the breach of contract the defendants have no right or title to the premises, with all right reverting to the plaintiff.

The plaintiff also asks for cost of the suit and attorney's fees.

Don Slevers vs. Lendon Gunter and Reva Johnson. The plaintiff claims that as a result of negligence of the defendants, the plaintiff has sustained and will continue to sustain great pain, suffering and discomfort. The plaintiff therefore seeks a judgment against the defendant for past medical expenses in the sum of $12,000 and for such further medical expenses as is shown at trial, for lost income in the sum of $3,000, for general damages for personal injuries in the sum of $300,000, for punitive damages in the sum $100,000, cost of the suit and attorney's fees.

John Bonnett and Betty Bonnett vs. Bradley Boiler Co., Inc., an Idaho corp. The plaintiff alleges the defendant is in default on lease payments and prays for a judgment against the defendant declaring the lease agreement forfeited and terminated, awarding possession of the premises to the plaintiff, for taxes due in the amount of $1,427, for rent due and unpaid in the amount of $9,627 plus late charges, for $33,600 for the balance of rent payable under the lease plus taxes, cost of the suit and attorney's fees.

Low's Ready Mix, Inc., an Idaho corp., vs. Daniel C. Skeem. The plaintiff seeks restitution for concrete furnished to the defendant in the amount of $16,341, and asks that the court issue an order to show cause why a pre-judgment writ of attachment should not be levied and that the writ be levied, cost of the suit and attorney's fees.

Ross A. Stanford and Bessie Stanford vs. Gene Conley, Mutual of Enumclaw, Dean Drieger dba Mobile Home and R.V. Specialties, Robert Lawrason dba Lawrason Realty and John Does I-IV. The plaintiff alleges the defendants have refused to repair damage to a mobile home owned by the plaintiff. The plaintiff therefore claims that as a direct and proximate result of the negligence of the defendants the plaintiffs have suffered damage to and destruction of their mobile home. The plaintiff asks for a judgment against the defendants for special damages to be proven at trial, for general damages in the sum of $250,000, for punitive damages in the sum of $250,000, for interest, cost of the suit and attorney's fees.

Branda Anderson, a minor child, by and through her guardian ad litem, Robin Anderson, and Robin Anderson and Kyle Anderson vs. Twin Falls School District No. 411. The plaintiff alleges that while walking by playground equipment at Harrison Elementary School, the plaintiff was struck by a log rolling down a small hill on the playground which struck her feet, knocking her down. As a result the plaintiff sustained bruises on both legs, a broken right ankle and other grievous and serious damage. The plaintiff therefore seeks a judgment against the defendant for general damages in the sum of $100,000, for medical expenses to be proven at trial, for cost of the suit and attorney's fees.

Roberts Elevator, Inc., an Idaho corp., vs. Ron Ellenson and Gateway Grain, Inc. The plaintiff seeks to recover money due and owing for grain shipped to the defendants in the amount of $38,730 plus interest, for cost of the suit and attorney's fees.

Magistrate court

JEROME — Two defendants were sentenced in Jerome County for driving under the influence of alcohol.

Noel Lee Harris Sr., Rt. 3, Jerome, was cited for driving while under the influence of intoxicants and driving without a valid driver's license. Fifth District Magistrate Judge Roger Burdick sentenced Harris to 10 days in the Jerome County jail, 8 days suspended, a $514.50 fine with $300 suspended and his driver's license suspended for 90 days. Harris was granted a one-year probation.

Carolyn S. Gresham aka Carolyn Hanson, 120 East C, Jerome, was cited for operating a vehicle while under the influence of intoxicants. Gresham was sentenced by Burdick to 10 days in the Jerome County jail, 8 days suspended, $314.50 fine with $200 suspended and a 90-day suspension of her driver's license. Gresham was granted a one-year probation and a restricted driver's license for the purpose of traveling to and from employment.

Bauscher's new contract is for 2 years

By CAROLYN MILLER
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — Kimberly School District Superintendent Richard Bauscher received a two-year extension of his contract by the Kimberly Board of Trustees.

Bauscher was assistant superintendent in Pullman, Wash., before being hired by the Kimberly district in 1984.

In executive sessions held by the board in March and April, Kimberly principals recommended that all tenured and non-tenured teachers be re-hired for the 1985-86 school year.

In other business:

• Bauscher said Kimberly schools wil begin on Aug. 26 to certify for funding provided by an emergecy levy in the Idaho Code. He says funding is based on the additional number of students attending class compared to enrollment the previous year and an accurate count must be turned in to the state prior to Sept. 9.

"We have to begin school on Aug. 26 in order to receive the funding which amounts to approximately $40,000," said Bauscher.

Trustee Carol White suggested the Filer Fair Board be requested to change the fair dates to avoid conflicts for students participating in fair activities.

• The District Professional Development Program was presented by Bauscher and approved by the trustees.

"The plan is for improving staff members. We need to have every opportunity to utilize self improvement opportunities," said Bauscher.

He recommended the 90 percent attendance rule be continued.

"It has been very successful," Bauscher said. "Other school districts are more lenient, but we are going to continue to require more amount of time in school and a positive attitude toward education."

The trustees voted to continue the ruling.

• Enthusiasm has been shown among local businesses and residents for refurbishing the junior high school auditorium, said Bauscher. He said $725 has been collected toward the purchase of new seats.

Kimberly Elementary School Principal Chris Charlton said the elementary school students want to donate $50 from their jog-a-thon, and White presented the board with a $100 donation.

• The recent supplemental levy was unanimously certified by the trustees. Bauscher said 393 ballots were cast with a passage rate of 75 percent. The ballots were tallied and rechecked by two judges and one clerk, said Bauscher. One ballot was spoiled with both a yes and no vote, he added.

Volunteers in Jerome to build pool in 1 day

By INA HADAM
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Beginning at 6 p.m. on May 31, more than 100 volunteers will begin working against the clock to complete the new children's wading pool in Jerome within 24 hours.

Work will continue ... until concrete is applied, then there will be a five- to six-hour halt during the night to allow the gunite to set up and cure.

At daylight on June 1, work will resume. Plans call for water to be in the pool before midnight.

The recently formed "Pool-in-a-Day" committee is headed by Mike Dahmer and Rocky Jackson, members of the Optimist Club which is sponsoring construction of the new pool. Dahmer has engineered the construction plans, and Jackson has arranged funding for the community-wide effort.

Jerome City Councilwoman Jeanne Vandiver will represent the city on the committee along with Scott Bybee, a J-U-B engineer and John Montegna, a former swimming pool contractor, who originated the "Pool-in-a-Day" idea.

The old wading pool in R.E. Shepherd Park was removed April 20 to prepare for installation of the new pool.

Initial plans include a contest to determine the first person to use the new pool.

Food for the "Pool-in-a-Day" volunteers will be provided by several service organizations. The Chamber of Commerce, Business and Professional Women and the Jerome Ministerial Association have already indicated their willingness to help.

The North Side Board of Realtors has promised to have two people working during the entire construction time.

Wendell City Council approves gravel for road

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — A dirt road in Wendell will be graveled by the city, even though it is not a city street.

"Rost Road" is located between two streets, West Avenues E and F, that were vacated by the city in 1978.

Frances Rost and Joe and Lucy Sellars told the Wendell City Council the dust on their road is unbearable. Trucks and heavy equipment travel the road regularly at high speeds and "really chew it up," Rost said.

"You can't even open your front door," she added. "The dust is really bad."

Council members were hesitant to improve the road because it is on private land and is not a platted street.

Mayor Otto Lemke said the vacating of West F avenues was a poor decision because now there is no access through the southwest section of Wendell. Rost Road, he noted, is a dead-end street that does not provide this much needed access and the other two avenues cannot be opened.

"If you close it, you're done," he said, and only the property owners can designate the land back into a street.

Whenever a street is vacated by the city, councilman Dick Beck said, "... it always comes back to haunt you."

At Rost's request, the council agreed to provide the street with a Dead End sign to reduce the amount of traffic, and a Children at Play sign to slow down traffic.

In other business:

• Doty reported the city crew accidentally dug up a telephone line last week. The company will probably bill the city about $500 or $600 for the damage, he estimated.

The city, Doty contended, should charge for permits to lay all types of lines through the city.

'1001 Nights' a little too racy for Egyptian officials' tastes

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The Egyptian government has gone to court to clean up the "Thousand and One Nights," arguing that racy passages in the centuries-old Arabic classic are a threat to Egyptian youth.

The Interior Ministry has charged three booksellers with misdemeanor violations of pornography laws for printing, importing and distributing the unexpurgated version of the legendary tales told by Scheherazade. It has seized 3,000 copies of the book, also known as "Arabian Nights."

Although a decision by the court is not expected before May 19, the case already has caused an uproar among scholars and intellectuals who fear the government move was prompted by Islamic extremists.

"The 'Thousand and One Nights' as a literary document has the right to exist unchanged because of its historic significance," retired magazine editor Anis Mansour, a prominent Egyptian intellectual, told The Associated Press.

"My fear is that if we continue to confiscate obscene words from our literature, it will not stop there," he said. "It will move to poetry, swimming suits, alcohol, and step by step it will lead us to become another (Islamic) fundamentalist state."

The Moslem Brotherhood and other fundamentalist groups have been pressuring President Hosni Mubarak's government to make Islam's stern religious law the national law of this largely Moslem nation.

Interior Ministry officials say they have nothing against well-known parts of the "Thousand and One Nights," such as the adventures of Sinbad the Sailor, Ali Baba and characters like Aladdin, known to children around the world.

But parts of the classic include graphic sexual references and such stories as the adventures of three young women who seduce a poor porter.

"The book is lucky it wasn't seized before," said Brig. Adly el-Kosheiry, head of the Interior Ministry's delinquents department, who initiated the case. "We are not asking for the execution of the 'Thousand and One Nights.' We want to expurgate from it the dirty words, sentences and tales which have bad effects on the youth and push them toward deviation and corruption."

Opponents of the government's action argue that sexually explicit passages form only a small part of the "Thousand and One Nights," and that a classic should be spared. "The words on sex constitute less than one-tenth of this book, which has such a high worldwide reputation and is an Arabic classic," said Sohair el-Kalamawy, a Cairo University professor who wrote her doctoral dissertation on the "Thousand and One Nights."

"There are much more graphic details of sex, even homosexual sex, in our heritage of literature and poetry. But it is our heritage and, of course, we will not change it."

But el-Khosheiry argued that the "Thousand and One Nights" is not part of Egypt's heritage and should be treated under the law as any other work would be.

Scholars say the stories are apparently Persian, Indian and Iraqi in origin, and the first complete edition appeared in the early 19th century in Calcutta, India, although some of the tales are more than 1,000 years old.

"The book is not part of our heritage, and even if it were, any part of our heritage which includes dirty words should be locked up in a museum and an expurgated version should be made available to the youth," the brigadier said. "Only the Koran, Islam's holy book, is untouchable."

Foot gesture sparks two murders

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A foot gesture that would be considered innocuous by most people was interpreted as a grevious insult by a singer from Thailand, and he is accused of shooting the offender to death.

The ethnic insult — pointing the sole of a foot at a Thai — has been disclosed as the motive in the March 9 shooting at a Thai restaurant in Hollywood, Deputy District Attorney Josephy Martinez said, Tuesday.

"No matter what the insult, it doesn't justify the killings," Martinez said. "There shouldn't be any extenuating circumstances because it is another culture."

Ponsak Trakulrat, 35, pleaded innocent at his arraignment Tuesday to one count of murder and three counts of attempted murder. A preliminary hearing has been scheduled for May 21.

Prosecutors allege that Trakulrat killed Korakanh Piousourinha, 29, a Laotian, and wounded a companion after the Laotian raised his feet to his chair while Trakulrat was singing at the Thai Town restaurant.

Police said Trakulrat, who regularly sang at the resfaurant as an amateur, believed Piousourinha was pointing the soles of his feet at him.

Anything to do with the foot can be insulting in some Asian cultures because it rubs in dirt and muck and "it is the lowest part of the body," said Officer Woody Saeaee of the Police Department's Asian Task Force.

However, Saeaee said it was not considered an insult "to the point they can kill each other."

Witnesses said Trakulrat warned Piousourinha and his three companions in Thai from onstage: "If you don't like my singing, get out."

But Piousourinha apparently kept his feet on the chair as Trakulrat continued singing.

Woman wins Xerox discrimination suit

Catherine McDermott single-handedly beat Xerox's lawyers

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A woman who was refused a job by Xerox Corp. on grounds that she was too fat at 249 pounds won a discrimination case against the company in New York's top court Tuesday.

In a 5-1 ruling, the Court of Appeals said the company had no right to deny Catherine McDermott a job as a systems analyst in 1974 on the grounds the company physician diagnosed her overweight condition as "gross obesity."

Mrs. McDermott, 67, of Staten Island, pursued her case through the courts for years, writing her own legal briefs without the aid of an attorney and said her major expenses were "Xeroxing costs" and postage.

She said she didn't know what she might receive for back pay and other benefits as a result of Tuesday's ruling but estimated it would be more than $100,000.

Since she started the action against Xerox, she said, the company had made increasing offers in attempts to persuade her to drop the action.

But the offers didn't take into consideration any raises based on promotions she may have received had she been hired by the firm, Mrs. McDermott said.

"If I can beat your hired lawyers, I certainly deserve a promotion," she told the company at one point in her court action.

Peter Marshall, counsel for the company, said he couldn't comment on what settlement offers were made. Marshall and Richard Chapman, another Xerox attorney, said they had no comment about the ruling until they had read the opinion.

Chief Judge Sol Wachtler, writing for "[illegible]," said, "We have found nothing in the (state Human Rights) statute or its legislative history indicating a legislative intent to permit employers to refuse to hire persons who are able to do the job simply because they have a possibly treatable condition of excessive weight."

Xerox attorneys had argued the company was concerned with potential impairments that Mrs. McDermott might develop in the future.

"I couldn't believe I would have lost," Mrs. McDermott said, "but it's like Yogi Berra — it's not over until it's over, you know?"

She said she started the lawsuit for what she said was the same reason Rosa Parks refused to sit at the back of a Montgomery, Ala., bus in 1955 and helped start the civil-rights movement. "I was just tired of it," she said.

Calphalon
Non-Reactive Commercial Aluminum Cookware

Calphalon is a nonstick surface that's part of the metal. It can't chip, crack, peel or rust. It's so hard you can use metal utensils without fear of scratching it. Clean up is easy because it's virtually stick free. Calphalon prevents the aluminum from reacting with tomato or lemon juice and respects the color and flavor of a delicate white sauce. Top Leading chefs endorse it.
